German Bombers Attack Both England and Scotland

Three Nazi Planes Shot Down by British During Raid over a Wide Area

Flight after Flight of Invaders Swoop over Countryside and Are Attacked by British

By The Associated Press

German bombers slashed at Britain anew and with greater vigor early today, (Wednesday) in widespread raids over the English midlands and Scotland.

At least three of the Nazis were sent crashing to earth in a spectacular swarm of British fighters planes aided by hot anti-aircraft fire.

Many incendiary and high-explosive bombs were dropped and fires were started, the British acknowledged, though they did not disclose the full extent of damage.

The raids, which are getting to be a regular mid-night-to-dawn diet for the British, followed confirmation that the French navy and air force were to pass into German and Italian control under the French Armistice terms.

British fighter planes warmed up to meet the bombers, dogfights were seen high over the English countryside, and anti-aircraft guns blazed away along the coast. The planes started before midnight, then kept coming, night after flight, from the southeastern England to far north in Scotland.

Fires started by incendiary bombs were extinguished quickly. Explosions were heard in Midland and southeastern England.

Italy Gets only Minor Gains in Armistice Terms

But France Must Demilitarize Her Naval Bases and Army

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 25 — Italy gained military occupation of only a slim border belt in the Alps, demilitarization of French colonial outposts in North Africa and full rights over Jibuti, only real outlet to Italian East Africa, under terms of the French-Italian armistice announced here tonight.

The armistice also forces France to demilitarize her naval bases in the Mediterranean while the war with Britain is in progress.

No mention was made of Nice, Savoy and Corsica, French-ruled

Hitler Promises Not To Use Ships Against British

Official Announcement Also Fixes Area of Occupation

FRENCH PRISONERS TO BE HELD DURING WAR

But All German Prisoners Will Be Returned to Germany

BERLIN, June 25 (AP) — The terms of the German-French Armistice, providing for the surrender of all France's fleet save that part of it necessary to police French colonies, were officially announced tonight.

(The official announcement of the details varied in no important particular from the armistice terms disclosed by the British ministry of information Sunday night.)

These were among the most important provisions:

Occupation by Nazi troops of more than half of France.

France to cease all hostilities against Germany not only on land but on the seas and in her colonies, territories and mandates.

In connection with the surrender of the fleet, however, the Germans "solemnly" promised not to use French vessels in war action except for harbor defense and mine sweeping, and said that they had no intention of demanding permanent possession of the fleet as the price of a final peace.

Fix Occupation Area

The area to be occupied was fixed as the territory north of a line from Geneva crossing the communities of Dole, Paray Le Monial and Bourges to a point about twenty kilometers east of Tours. From that point the line runs southeast along the Tour-Angouleme railway, then to Libourne; then over Mont Demarson and Orthez to the Spanish border.

Germany, in this third article, stated its intention of occupying the west French coast only as long as was necesary for completion of the war against England.

The French will be permitted to set up a government anywhere within the unoccupied region or if they prefer, to return to Paris.

Other clauses provide:

Nazis To Hold Prisoners

All German war and civil prisoners held in France are to be turned over to the German authorities. France agrees to deliver to the Germans any persons in her colonies or mandated lands who the Germans want.

French prisoners of war are to be held until the conclusion of peace.

French troops in the region already occupied are to be disarmed withdrawn and demobilized as soon as possible.

The departing French troops are to leave their weapons.

Germany may require delivery in good condition of all cannon, tanks, warplanes, infantry weapons and munitions of troops in the occupied section if such a step is necessary to preserve the Armistice.

Weapons which remain in occupied territory are to be assembled and placed under German-Italian control. No war materials are to be manufactured in the unoccupied French region. In the occupied area the coast defense, with its weapons, is to be placed at the disposal of the Germans.

The location of land mines and other defense facilities is to be reported to the German high command. The French fleet, except that portion necessary for policing the colonies, is to be assembled in stipulated French harbors, disarmed and kept under German-Italian control.

No Fighting By French

The French government guarantees that none of its army remaining in service will be used in the war.

PENNSYLVANIA'S LEADERS AT THE CONVENTION

Former President Wildly Cheered as He Addresses Philadelphia Convention

Declares That for America There Is No Such Thing as Isolation and Urges All Lawful Assistance Be Extended to the Allies; Offers Seven Point Program

By RICHARD L. TURNER

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA, June 25 (AP) —Herbert Hoover emphatically impressed two prime objectives of party endeavor upon a cheering Republican national convention tonight — oust the New Deal and keep America at peace "unless the western hemisphere is attacked."

At the same time, the former president told the vast throng gathered in this huge and resounding auditorium that for America there was no such thing as "isolation,"—that a realistic view of foreign problems dictated that all lawful assistance be exteneded to the Allies.

And, he cautioned against exaggeration of "our immediate dangers."

The ocean is broad, Hoover told Republican delegates massed on the convention floor before him, and an invader "must first pass our navy," a navy which is "strong enough to stop anything in sight now."

At the very least, Hoover said, "this ocean and our magnificent navy give time for sober preparation."

Relentlessly, Hoover castigated the New Deal for "following the suicidal road for liberty that led to disaster in Europe. He said the Republican party "must at once undertake seven stern tasks:

"We must develop and maintain foreign policies that keep us out of these wars unless we are attacked. We should facilitate all nations fighting for their freedom in procuring materials and munitions, but subject to definite limitations which keep us out of war.

"We must recall our people from the flabbiness of the New Deal. We must reestablish stamina, character and ideals. We must regenerate hope and confidence in America."

Delegates Bewildered

The delegates, and the thousands upon thousands of spectators poured into the hall after a day which for the most part saw the battle of the candidates reach a bewildered pause while all awaited the next development.

This was receipt of reports from several reliable quarters that Joseph E. Pew, effective leader of the seventy-two vote Pennsylvania delegation was prepared to throw more than fifty of these ballots to Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio on the second ballot. Pew, however, denied it and insisted he was sticking with Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania "to the bitter end."

The expectation that the Pennsylvania votes might swing to Taft led some of those who have kept close tab on the situation to predict that while Thomas E. Dewey of New York would lead on the first ballot, he would be overtaken on the second by Senator Taft.

Where this situation would leave Wendell Willkie, and almost unheard of climb from dark horse status to a leading contender within a few weeks, was uncertain. Few accretions to the Willkie column were reported today, but his strength — particularly his secondary strength in potential gains on later ballots — was undeniable and was obviously keeping his opponents in a state of jittery alertness

Many Hear Hoover

Discussing this situation, the delegates swarmed to the great convention hall tonight to listen to and applaud Hoover. His associates had billed the address in advance as an unusually striking message and one which might well change the course of the convention.

For days they had made no secret of their hope that Hoover's address might arouse the delegates to a mighty ovation, and so impress them as to start a swing which would lead to the former president's nomination.

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP) — President Roosevelt, invoking a plan of World War days to provide officers for the expanding fleet, announced today that 5,000 young volunteers would be trained annually for commissions in the nval reserve.

Roosevelt Signs Bill Increasing Federal Taxes

About 2,200,000 Citizens Will Pay Income Tax for Five Years

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP) — The nation shouldered its heaviest federal tax load since the World War today.

President Roosevelt's signature made law of a bill estimated to raise an additional $4,692,500,000 in the next five years by adding 2,200,000 citizens to the list of income tax payers and by raising the rates on income, profits, excise, gift and inheritance taxes. The money will be used to help finance the defense program authorized by Congress.

The treasury calculated that the law would increase anticipated federal revenue in the 1941 fiscal year, which begins Monday, from $5,652,300,000 (not counting social security funds, which are now outside the budget) to $6,367,600,000. An extra $994,300,000 was expected to be raised in each of the following four years.

Next year's revenue, if realized, will be the largest since 1920, when peak collections were made on World War taxes, and the 1942 fiscal year may set a new income record of approximately $7,000,000,000.

2,200,000 Will Pay

Officials estimated that 2,200,000 persons would pay federal income taxes for the first time because of reduction of personal exemptions for heads of families from $2,500 to $2,000 and for single persons from $1,000 to $800. This lowering of exemptions also will result in increasing the payments of those now paying taxes.

To facilitate the defense program, the act authorized the treasury to borrow immediately against the five-year proceeds of the measure. Sale of $4,000,000,000 of "national defense notes" was authorized and the national debt limit was increased from $45,000,000,000 to

West Virginia Young Republican Leader Urges Naming of Willkie

LOGAN, W. Va., June 25 (AP) — President Paul Chambers of the West Virginia Young Republican League urged today support of Businessman Wendell Willkie as the presidential nominee "to win the coming campaign."

"Politicians who seek to block his nomination," Chambers asserted, "will serve neither their party nor their country."

The young Republican leader issued the statement after claims at Philadelphia that the state's convention delegation had split, with a neight-member bloc in opposition to Willkie.

Mayor D. Boone Dawson of Charleston, nominee for governor, asserted there that "I can honestly say that seventy-five per cent of the Republicans in West Virginia want Dewey; and the other twenty-five per cent don't want Willkie."

"The Republicans of West Virginia do want Willkie and thousands of Democrats want him also," Chambers asserted.

Wendell Willkie would make a great president, and under his leadership the Republicans could win the coming campaign," he added "in this fateful year, a vast majority of Americans are not concerned with partisan labels, but are sincerely searching for great leadership, which for so long they have lacked.

"They have seen what narrow partisanship, vacillation and compromise with mediocre leadership brought to the once-great democracies across the seas, and they are determined that it shall not happen here."

At Charleston, twenty-two supporters sent Dawson a telegram expressing "resentment" of his statement and declaring Willkie has been receiving support all over the state.

"Furthermore," the telegram added, "if you aspire to the governorship of this state you will need many Democratic votes and statements such as you made yesterday will probably result in loss of their support."

One of the signers was L. Newton Thomas, president of the Charleston Willkie-for-President Club.

Champion Hard Luck Man Airs His Grievances at G.O.P. Convention

PHILADELPHIA, June 25 (AP) — A middle-sized delegate with the button and the big red nose raced across the table and delivered himself of the 15,349th unofficial speech of the Republican national convention.

"Gents," he gulped, "you've heard from the original Taft man, the original Dewey man, the original Willkie man, the original Gannett man. I'm the original hard luck man.

"What's wrong, brother?" sympathized a fellow delegate.

"Everything."

This time the middle-sized delegate had an audience, which, to aching feet, is the easiest thing to get at the convention.

His Hat Broken

"First," he said, "I get in an elevator to go up to my room and there is such a crush that I get my hat broken."

Two other delegates pointed to their sisted straws.

"Right," said the middle-sized delegate. "Just wait. Here, boy, bring me another beer, Just wait. Next I lose my badge."

His listeners shook their heads.

"While the chairman is getting me another one," he continued, "I go sight-seeing out to the zoo and what happens . . . The zoo's elephant dies."

The delegates said he couldn't be blamed for that.

"I know, I know," he said, "but it just goes to show what a hard luck man I am. But wait."

Sees Farley's Picture

He pointed to a picture over the table at which the group were seated.

"Look at that," he gasped.

The others looked.

"I came in here for a beer," said the middle-sized delegate, "sit down and look up and whose picture do I see? James A. Farley's."

Sure enough it was—autographed and all

"I'm going home," announced the hard luck man.

"Where you staying?"

The middle-sized delegate made a face.

"At the Roosevelt," he said, backing out, "the Roosevelt."

Pittman Favors British Plans To Fight from the New World

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP) — Chairman Pittman (D-Nev) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee expressed a hope tonight that British plans to "fight from the new world with our navy" would not be "too long delayed by futile encouragement to fight on" in England.

He said in a statement that there was "no time for further muddling," that Britain was "totally unprepared for defense and that nothing the United States has to give can do more than delay the result."

The text of the Senator's statement, distributed to the press, follows:

"The probability of Hitler's domination of Europe is evident, It is my personal opinion that there is no time for further muddling. It is no secret that Great Britain is totally unprepared for defense and that nothing the United States has to give can do more than delay the result.

"Churchill's statement, 'we will never surrender' and that if any portions of the British Isles are subjected we will fight from the New World with our navy, if carried out and carried out immediately will end Hitler's ambition for world conquest. It is to be hoped that this plan will not be too long delayed by futile encouragement to fight on. It is conclusively evident that Congress will not authorize intervention in the European war."

He said in a statement that there was "no time for further muddling," that Britain was "totally unprepared for defense and that nothing the United States has to give can do more than delay the result."

The text of the Senator's statement, distributed to the press, follows:

"The probability of Hitler's domination of Europe is evident. It is my personal opinion that there is no time for further muddling. It is no secret that Great Britain is totally unprepared for defense and that nothing the United States has to give can do more than delay the result.

"Churchill's statement, 'we will never surrender' and that if any portions of the British Isles are subjected we will fight from the New World with our navy, if carried out and carried out immediately will end Hitler's ambition for world conquest. It is to be hoped that this plan will not be too long delayed by futile encouragement to fight on. It is conclusively evident that Congress will not authorize intervention in the European war."

Dewey, Willkie in Lead in West Va. Poll of Leaders

PHILADELPHIA, June 25 (AP)—World from back home today showed a close division of opinion among West Virginia Republican county chairmen between Wendell Willkie and Thomas E. Dewey for the presidential nomination.

National Committeeman Walter S. Hallahan, polling the fifty-five chairmen by telegraph, received twenty-eight replies in which twelve said they favored Willkie, eleven spoke out for Dewey, three said they wanted U. S. Senator Robert A. Taft and two expressed no preference.

The wire asked their opinion "as to the strongest nominee for president."

Hallahan said he made the inquiry after a statement here by Mayor D. Boone Dawson of Charleston, Republican gubernatorial nominee, that "I can honestly say that seventy-five per cent of the Republicans in West Virginia want Dewey; and the other twenty-five per cent don't want Willkie."

Dawson, after a conference of a group of delegates yesterday, also declared "West Virginians up here are fundamentally Republicans.

"We don't think our party so hard up that we have to nominate as our standard bearer a man who was a Democrat and voted for Roosevelt in 1932, and still was listed as Democratic in 1939," Dawson added.

Former President

pleted before the dinner hour. Out of hours of controversy between advocates of strict aloofness from the war abroad, and a group favoring all possible material aid to the Allies a plank emerged containing the following principal provisions:

Sharp criticism of the Roosevelt administration on the ground that it had neglected the national defenses.

A strong keep-out-of-war pledge.

Leaves Candidate Free

Alf M. Landon, the party's 1936 nominee, who was chairman of the resolutions subcommittee which dealt with the problem, told reporters the plank was so worded that whoever the nominee and whatever his views, he would be free to shape his course in accordance with world conditions and future war developments as they arise.

With hard pounding Chairman Joseph W. Martin rapped the night session into order at 8:32 p. m. E. S. T., and presented John Andrew Gregg, of Kansas City, bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Chourch, who prayed for divine approval of the deliberations and that "the desires of our hearts may be good."

"Keep us from war hysteria," Bishop Gregg prayed. "Keep us calm and keep us at peace."

Hoover advanced down the center aisle and the crowd broke into a demonstration which made its previous outbursts seem tame. It was notable more for its volume of sound than duration for as quickly as the former president had disappeared among the notables on the speaker's stage, it ended and Miss Speak began to sing.

Hoover was dressed in a dark blue double-breasted suit with a blue necktie. The familiar high, stiff starched collar of his White House days was replaced by one a bit lower.

Ovation for Hoover

As soon as he was introduced the shouting, stamping and applause was renewed, in greater volume and intensity. The demonstration roared on and on, while Hoover stood at the dias, smiling faintly and nodding to one side and the other.

In the vast hall, delegates waved their hats. One grabbed the Tennessee state standard from its socket and started down the aisle, but a policeman stopped him and set it back in its place.

Five and one half minutes after the demonstration began it ended, and Hoover began to speak standing with hands on hips and arms akimbo. He spoke with deliberation, his eyes fixed on his manuscrip. Here and there he changed a phrase of the prepared address.

Hoover recited certain governmental practices which, he said, preceded the establishment of totalitarian government abroad — "pressure groups, business, labor, farmers, demanding relief or special privilege" while "class hate poisoned cooperation." Then he asked:

"Does this sound unfamiliar to you?"

"No — no — no—" resounded from the crowd.

And a moment later he got a big laugh with his statement that the New Deal had "stabilized depression."

The amplification system made his voice seem fuzzy and lacking in its usual resonance. There were appeals of "louder louder," from the rear of the hall broken by shouted boo's, as, at that point, he referred to the possibility of the president seeking a third term.

The trends and tides of sentiment on the selection of a presidential candidate seemed, meanwhile, to have reached an expectant and bewildered pause, which found observers and delegates alike watching excitedly for the next development.

Plan Pro-Willkie Bloc

The day brought with it no signs of important gains for Wendell L. Willkie, the New York utilities executive, aside from an announcement that steps were being taken to organize a "pro-Willkie" Congressional bloc, to offset the "stop-Willkie" bloc of House members which emerged yesterday.

Willkie himself had taken notice of the latter. He told a group of Indianans that he himself was not "discouraging other candidates," and that his rivals all fine men. The utilities issue, he said, had been raised against him.

"Surely the Republican party will not want to engage in the New Deal custom of raising class distinctions," he said. "I have been investigated by every New Deal agency. If you can find any successful accusation against me, I want you to be against me."

Meanwhile Thomas E. Dewey repeated his often-stated denial that he and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio were engineering a deal, aimed at combining their strength in an effort to head Willkie off. Such a report, Dewey said, was "a phoney."

Claims 370 Votes

He added that he saw no evidence of his support dropping off to Willkie. On the contrary, he asserted, he received a windfall only today in the form of a pledge of support from an unnamed delegation on which he had not previously counted. He claimed 370 to 410 votes on the first ballot.

Earlier, Former Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas, a Dewey spokesman, issued a statement saying "nothing is more silly to men experienced in the trend of political conventions than the reiterated propaganda that 'Dewey is slipping.' Delegations do not slip away from the top candidate."

Taft Not Talking

Saying little and resting upon a previous claim that he would lead on the first ballot, Taft and his campaign managers tightened their lines against inroads from the Willkie or any other sources.

Calling for Senator Arthur A. Vandenberg's nomination, Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota told a meeting of the Vandenberg board of strategy that the senator was "the only candidate who can carry the Middle West . . ." He said Vandenberg was "right on the farm question and the western farmers agree on his attitude."

Meanwhile, Paul Block, Pittsburgh and Toledo newspaper publisher, conferred with Willkie, praised him as a man who could "definitely defeat Mr. Roosevelt." Unless the convention should choose Hoover, he added, he would be for Willkie.

Hoover Shows Strength

The publisher's statement gave emphasis to a quiet and hopeful campaign that has been present in Philadelphia since the delegates assembled—the Hoover campaign. Several old associates and admirers of the former president have been busy on his behalf. They made no secret of their hope that his speech of tonight might start a convention swing in Hoover's direction.

The convention met this morning, completed its permanent organization and heard its permanent chairman, Rep. Joseph W. Martin, minority leader of the House, charge the New Deal with a seven-year "March toward one-man government."

"Every ideal of Americanism has been imperilled by those who would make our government and our nation tools to be manipulated by one man at the head of a great and unelected political bureaucracy," he said. "The time has come to end all this, if we are to continue to live as a free people."

Declaring that "there is no such thing as isolation from wars which envelop two-thirds of all the people in the world," the man whom President Roosevelt displaced in the White House asserted none the less "that the most vital realism in all our relations requires that we keep out of these wars unless the Western Hemisphere is attacked."

But on the domestic front, Hoover declared "we have to fight." Citing "warnings" which he said could be found in "the fate of democracy of Europe," he asserted that totalitarian government arose there after the structure of liberty was weakened by "starry-eyed men who believed they could plan and force the economic life of the people."

And in America, he said, "we have been following the suicide road for liberty that led to disaster in Europe."

Attitude on War

The importance which Hoover placed upon the foreign policy section of his speech was stressed by the fact that it was the last section he finished. In it he apparently undertook to set forth an answer to one of the most thorny problems which has faced the convention—what formal attitude to take toward war.

Discarding isolation as impossible, whether it be economic, moral or emotional, Hoover said that "there are shifting dangers in which the nation should have common counsel that we may have national unity."

Then, for himself, he left open the door for cooperation between the Roosevelt administration and its Republican opposition by saying that when the party has chosen its leader in a few days "the president will be able to secure from him the views of our party upon those transcendent questions."

The nation's foreign policy, Hoover said, should be based upon "calm realism," the first requirement of which, he said, "is not to exaggerate our immediate dangers." Other aspects of such a policy he described as including "competent preparedness" and facilitation of supplies and munitions "to those nations who are fighting for their freedom" provided such assistance "involves no action which takes us into war" and that "as liberty lives by law we must act within the law."

Hope Is in Democracy

Hoover said "it is nonsense that we cannot defend freedom here even if the old world fails." And to this he added that "the hope of mankind and the hope of civilization is that democracy survive on this continent."

"Those who advocate war should never forget one thing," he added. "The first necessity of any great war is to set up a dictatorship. France and England were compelled to do so. But with our already weakened structure of liberty and the fabulous national debt we shall have, and the mania for power of the New Deal, we would be generations in restoring free men in America."

In crisp, sharp sentences he called upon his party to lead American in "seven stern tasks" of preparation for a future in which much of the world outside the United States will "long continue" to be dominated by "dictatorships, totalitarian economics and militarism."

War Only If Attacked

He advocated foreign policies "that keep us out of war unless we are attacked."

"We should facilitate all nations fighting for their freedom in procuring materials and munitions," he declared, "but subject to definite limitations which keep us out of war."

He said Republicans would "welcome" President Roosevelt as a third term candidate; he recommended putting into circulation at home and abroad the nineteen billions of "dead gold" in this country; he endorsed the "principle of protection for labor, the farmers, the old and destitute; he called for an increase in national income to 100 billion dollars and a reduction in federal spending as an attack on the national debt and deficit financing.

In discussing Europe, Hoover said totalitarian governments there were preceded by "so-called liberals" or "totalitarian liberals" who "politically controlled credit, prices, and production of industry, farmer and labor."

They "devalued, pump-primed and inflated," he said, and they met "every failure" by employing that "handmaiden of power named 'gimme a billion, quick.'"

Credit Undermined

When unemployment became chronic, he said, the government credit was undermined, the resulting confusions "rang down the curtain upon liberty."

Of the third term he said that "certainly the New Deal has not been allergic to power. And now fed on power they demand a third term for Mr. Roosevelt."

"That is not a mere violation of tradition," Hoover said. "It is a violation of a fundamental restraining upon power in this republic. But we Republicans would welcome Mr. Roosevelt as a candidate. For this battle must be fought out under the guns of debate."

"Seven Stern Tasks"

The "seven stern tasks" which he said must be undertaken if the nation is to be prepared were these:

"First. We must restore and revitalize liberty in America.

"Second. We must restore and rebuild morals in government.

"Third. We must restore decent life and living to one-third of our farmers and workers, who have been chronically submerged by the New Deal.

"Fourth. We must restore competence to government.

"Fifth. We must prepare this nation to defend the Western Hemisphere.

"Sixth. We must develop and maintain foreign policies that keep us out of these wars unless we are attacked. We should facilitate all nations fighting for freedom in procuring materials and munitions, but subject to definite limitations which keep us out of war.

"Seventh. We must recall our people from the flabbiness of the New Deal. We must reestablish stamina, character and ideals. We must regenerate hope and confidence in America."

No Reference to Party

Hoover accused the New Deal—a term which he used throughout his speech so that he made virtually no references to the Democratic party—of incompetence in its choice of government officials, in its fiscal policies, in its "purchase of three-quarters of the whole world's gold supply," in agriculture, in relief and in national defense.

"Mr. Roosevelt," he said, "recently broadcast an alibi that preparedness had been neglected by Republican administrations.

"In the six years of peaceful world outlook before the New Deal," the former president continued, "we had spent about 680 million a year on our preparedness. As a matter of fact Mr. Roosevelt considered we were spending too much on it. He supported the Democratic platform in 1932 which implied that. And in 1934 he drastically reduced our defense to 550 million, lopping off twenty millions from the air corps alone. And that year he reduced the number of commissioned naval graduates by one-half."

Hoover said that "Nazi-ism and our New Deal both rose to power in 1933" and since then "Republicans in Congress supported repeated increases in defense appropriations until they reached 1,400 million a year."

In "these six years," he continued, "the New Deal has spent 6.2 billions" yet "after all that expenditure we are told we are wholly unprepared to defend ourselves."

The drive for preparedness, he said, "is another battle which America better not lose. If we are to achieve preparedness we must have a chance in our national administration."

Financial Views

Of "deficits, debts, inflations and their spawn of managed currency," Hoover said that "they have been the curse of the earth ever since the last war," and "they are inscribed on the tombstone of every fallen democracy."

Hoover said that in the United States "it is easy to prove that the people are fearful of the New Deal."

"The evidence of their fears and loss of confidence is when they postpone the building of homes," he declared. "It shows when they fail to improve and construct factories to produce the new goods to which science and invention beckon our energies. x x x

"There can be a free economy in America which releases the productive energies of men. Or there can be a dictated economy. These cannot be mixed."

Of the administration's gold-buying policy, Hoover said that "we have buried nineteen billions mostly in a hole at Fort Knox."

"Unless we quickly restore the vitality of this pile of dead gold, this nation will fane a loss of the whole nineteen billion of it. We should start by putting it in circulation at home. We should start putting it in circulation abroad by swapping it for useful metals which we do not ourselves produce. We could far better have many years' stock of manganese, nickel, tungsten and tin than the so-called precious metals. These we may need for national defense."

Japan To Have "Monroe Doctrine"

Tokyo, June 26 (Wednesday (AP) — The newspaper Asahi reported today that Japan shortly would issue a sweeping pronouncement amounting to an Oriental Monroe Doctrine warning all powers against interference of any kind in all territories in East Asia.

The newspaper said Japan now is prepared to establish and guarantee autonomy in East Asia.

The proposed pronouncement, it said, would apply to Italy Germany and Great Britain as well as neutrals in the European conflict.

The newspaper reported the new policy would oppose the transfer of territories or alteration of the status qua in East Asia either through cessation or actual force.

Maryland Swings Toward Vandenberg

PHILADELPHIA, June 25 (AP)—Support for Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) on at least the second and third ballots began developing today among the sixteen delegates from Maryland to the Republican national convention.

Pledged to Dewey as a result of the state's presidential preference primary in which he was the only candidate, the sixteen Maryland votes will be cast as a unit for the New York prosecutor on the first ballot.

Thereafter, said Former Gov. Harry Nice, the delegation was expected to divide.

The big change, he said, would come on the second ballot with thirteen votes going to Willkie and three to Vandenberg. Then, he said, on the third, Vandenberg would pick up two more leaving eleven for Willkie.

Nice said his forecasts were based upon an assumption that Dewey strength would not be sufficient on the first and second ballots to warrant carrying on his support from Maryland. Under custom the state's delegates recognizing the primary results would support Dewey so long as they "conscientously felt" he had a chance of nomination.

Two Men Convicted Of $30,110 Theft

CINCINNATI, June 25. (AP)—Their trial terminating abruptly without defense testimony, Elmer Whitt, 30, of Columbus and Ivan Phillips, 33, Marion, O., were convicted today of taking $30,110 from the Avondale branch of the Central Trust Co., May 28.

Life imprisonment automatically became the penalty when Judge Dudley Miller Outcalt omitted any recommendation of mercy. Both men had waived jury trial.

Whitt and Phillips were arrested a few hours after the robbery when they called at a downtown garage for a car they had left for servicing. Garage attendants had found $2,000 in packaged currency on the car-floor. Approximately $28,000 was found in the secret-compartment of another vehicle they abandoned in their flight.

Both were identified by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation as the principals involved in the robbery of the bank of South Charleston, W. Va., last year.

G.O.P. Platform

Minor Point Protested

Landon asserted that there was no objection in the full committee to the part of the plank dealing with policy but that one member had protested "a very minor point" relating to a statement about the cost of the World War to the United States.

The plank was understood to contain a statement that: "The Republican party stands for Americanism, preparedness and peace."

This was understood to have been followed by a statement that the Democratic party stands for unpreparedness and tactics threatening toward war.

In its other phases, the plank was said by informed persons to include a provision for defending the Monroe Doctrine.

Earlier Landon had stalked wearily out of a meeting of a platform subcommittee which he heads and announced that his group had come to an agreement on the substance of the plank. He said it "takes into consideration changing world conditions," intimating that it was broad enough in scope to permit latitude in future action. He gave a negative reply to a question as to whether it would tie the presidential candidate to a "dogmatic statement."

"Punch" in Declaration

Striving to put "punch" into the declaration, the platform committee sent the plank back to Landon's group earlier in the day after it heard read a substitute proposal sponsored by C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois.

This proposal criticized the New Deal in blunt language on the ground that it had failed to build up national defenses over the last seven years. It was charged that "vicious attacks" on business had weakened the defense structure and had lowered the morale of the people.

The Brooks plan also called for "a strong and vigorous policy of national defense" with military forces "so strong that no other power shall ever be able to set foot on American soil."

On the other hand, it urged that no move be made "for the purpose of interfering in European or Asiatic conflicts."

The Brooks proposal carried no reference, direct or indirect, to aid to Great Britain or the Allies, differing in this respect from the original plank which had been drafted for consideration of the platform group.

This latter plank extended sympathy to oppressed people, advocating that "the government, in the future as in the past, acting as a neutral and not as a aggressor, will extend sympathy and aid and will permit aid and comfort to be extended to such peoples as is consistent with the law of nations and the law of the land."

Several committee members said that this declaration was being preserved in the new draft, the more forceful language of the Brooks proposal being added in condemning the Roosevelt administration.

French Government Plans To Move

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, June 26 — (Wednesday) — (AP) — Reports received at the Spanish border tonight said the French government is planning to move to Clarmont-Ferrand, 170 miles north of the Mediterranean in south central France.

The Spanish Embassy in France announced it was transferring to a locality near there.

Mines Reported Laid by United States at Both Ends of Panama Canal

Heavy Railroad Artillery Said To Have Been Moved into Position; Washington Issues Denial

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP) — The Daily News, in a copyrighted article tonight said that the United States had mined both entrances to the Panama Canal, had rushed heaviest railroad artillery to the Atlantic side of the zone and had placed the zone's defense forces on virtually a war footing.

The article, written by Lowell Limpus under a Panama dateline, said that with 30,000 men under arms, military authorities called the maneuvers an "emergency rehearsal."

Predict "Real Trouble"

"But with intense activity still continuing," the article said, "qualified observers believe the army was getting ready for real trouble on short notice."

"The mine laying fleet moved out on both sides of the isthmus yesterday immediately after the big Italian liner, Conte Biancamano, was shifted from a position from which its passengers and crew could have watched the proceedings," the article continued.

"The army's new mine planter, Niles, accompanied by a number of tugs and smaller craft which have been transformed into temporary mine layers, went into action on the Pacific side before the Biancamano had entered the canal proper, while the mine layer Graham and accompanying craft finished most of the job on the Atlantic side before the liner made its appearance and anchored there this afternoon.

Shipping Warned

"Meanwhile, guard ships took stations outside the mine fields evidently to warn approaching vessels. Rigid restrictions were suddenly clamped down on the movement of smaller craft.

"There was still no knowledge here of reports that the fleet had been ordered from its Hawaii station to the canal.

"The two batteries of huge fourteen - inch railway guns shifted from the Pacific side will be able to back up the great coastal defense rifles in the forts defending the Atlantic entrance to the canal, adding immeasurably to the strength of that side of the isthmus."

No New Mines Laid War Department Says

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP)—War department officials said tonight that controlled mines were maintained constantly about the entrances of the Panama canal but that no new mines had been laid there recently.

Department press officers, who said they had checked the highest sources here, expressed the opinion that army mine layers reported in operation off the canal zone yesterday were servicing existing installations.

The controlled mines are operated by electricity from shore, they said, and are protected by coast artillery against being swept up by an enemy fleet. The mines must be checked regularly, the officers said, and repaired or replaced in case they are out of order.

As to reports that the heaviest railroad artillery in the canal zone had been rushed to the Atlantic side, the officers said they had no information on this but that canal defense forces were engaged in maneuvers almost constantly.

Within the last year the canal garrison has been strengthened by additional artillery—especially anti-aircraft guns—fighting planes, infantry.

The canal, which enables United States fleet to move one ocean to the other quic considered vital to the nation fense. Army planners say it is vulnerable to air attack and age. They contend that, to p it against being put out of mission by aerial bombardme hemisphere must be kept fre enemy bases.

Destination of U. S. Fleet a Mystery

HONOLULU, June 25 (AP) — Perplexity mingled with anxiety as this mid-Pacific fortress awaited word of the destination of the units of the United States fleet which put to sea unexpectedly under sealed orders.

Families of officers and enlisted men alike, left behind after the farewells yesterday, were uncertain as to the destination of husbands and fathers.

What indications there were in official naval circles here and in Washington maintaining strict secrecy, still pointed to the Panama Canal as possibly the next rendezvous for the gray "battle wagons."

The warships, here, at Hilo, Lahaina roads, pulled their anchors, put to sea and soon were out of sight.

Pearl Harbor, scene of much activity since the 1940 maneuvers started in April, was somewhat deserted. The battleships Colorado, West Virginia and Arizona remained, and it was reported the Hawaiian detachment of about thirty vessels would continue in these waters.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

France's cup of defeat is made the more bitter by Winston Churchill's formal charge that the Petain ministry broke solemn assurances to Britain in agreeing to surrender the French fleet to German and Italian conquerors.

Yet that does not solve the mystery of where the French battlecraft actually are, or how important a factor they will prove in the continuing war between Britain and the Continental Axis allies.

"The safety of Great Britain and the British empire is powerfully though not decisively affected by what happens to the French fleet," Churchill said.

Whether that covers lack of information in London as to what the commanders and crews of French warcraft intend to do on their own initiative, or is designed to mask the real status of the French fleet from German and Italian high commands, can only be conjectured. It is a definite British warning, however, to such French warships and merchant craft as are still at sea that if they attempt to comply with surrender orders it will be at their peril.

Belittles Petain Excuse

Churchill brushed aside in advance the excuse the Petain ministry might be expected to offer for the alleged failure to live up to French commitments against permitting the French fleet to fall in German hands under any circumstances. Lacking any but the British version of the Franco-German armistice terms, it seems possible that the French negotiators accepted at face value the German pledge to intern the vessels, if surrendered, and not to use them in the war against Great Britain.

"We know the value of that (German promise)," Churchill commented, jerringly.

Nevertheless, the fact that victorious Germany did make that commitment to France could have significance. It could be an indication of the nature of the campaign Hitler is mapping against England, his only remaining foe-in-arms in Europe.

What Churchill has styled the "battle of Britain" is as yet a seize. Nazi air raiding over England and increasing activity by Nazi planes, submarines and other torpedo craft against British shipping mark the first skirmishes of the final struggle for mastery between British sea power and German air power.

Plan Attack on England

There have been hints, however, that in the wide Fjords of Nazi-conquered Norway and perhaps elsewhere the German high command is carefully rehearsing a triple-phase technique for pressing the war on England. A combination of German sea, air and land power is being drilled for swift action, according to these reports.

In neutral military judgment, there is meaning in the recent spotting by British aircraft of the Nazi battleship Scharnhorst off the coast of Norway. It suggests that the Germans are organizing for a quick night thrust by the navy, army and air force at some selected point in the British isles to establish bases if not to attempt invasion in force of England.

A Nazi attempt to establish air or submarine bases in Ireland would answer the question of German strategy. It would mean almost certainly that Hitler had elected first to attempt starvation of England rather than invasion.

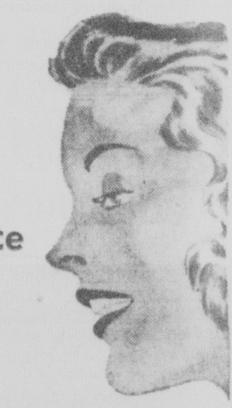

And that purpose also may be indicated by the German armistice pledge not to use French naval craft, if surrendered, in the war on England. Had Berlin contemplated an English invasion "blitzkrieg," surrendered French battleships would have been too valuable for protection of Nazi troop transports to have permitted any question to arise as to what use Germany might make of them.

Meanwhile Thomas E. Dewey repeated his often-stated denial that he and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio were engineering a deal, aimed at combining their strength in an effort to head Willkie off. Such a report, Dewey said, was "a phoney."

Claims 370 Votes

He added that he saw no evidence of his support dropping off to Willkie. On the contrary, he asserted, he received a windfall only today in the form of a pledge of support from an unnamed delegation on which he had not previously counted. He claimed 370 to 410 votes on the first ballot.

Earlier, Former Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas, a Dewey spokesman, issued a statement saying "nothing is more silly to men experienced in the trend of political conventions than the reiterated propaganda that 'Dewey is slipping.' Delegations do not slip away from the top candidate."

Taft Not Talking

Saying little and resting upon a previous claim that he would lead on the first ballot, Taft and his campaign managers tightened their lines against inroads from the Willkie or any other sources.

Calling for Senator Arthur A. Vandenberg's nomination, Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota told a meeting of the Vandenberg board of strategy that the senator was "the only candidate who can carry the Middle West . . ." He said Vandenberg was "right on the farm question and the western farmers agree on his attitude."

Meanwhile, Paul Block, Pittsburgh and Toledo newspaper publisher, conferred with Willkie, praised him as a man who could "definitely defeat Mr. Roosevelt." Unless the convention should choose Hoover, he added, he would be for Willkie.

Hoover Shows Strength

The publisher's statement gave emphasis to a quiet and hopeful campaign that has been present in Philadelphia since the delegates assembled—the Hoover campaign. Several old associates and admirers of the former president have been busy on his behalf. They made no secret of their hope that his speech of tonight might start a convention swing in Hoover's direction.

The convention met this morning, completed its permanent organization and heard its permanent chairman, Rep. Joseph W. Martin, minority leader of the House, charge the New Deal with a seven-year "March toward one-man government."

"Every ideal of Americanism has been imperilled by those who would make our government and our nation tools to be manipulated by one man at the head of a great and unelected political bureaucracy," he said. "The time has come to end all this, if we are to continue to live as a free people."

Declaring that "there is no such thing as isolation from wars which envelop two-thirds of all the people in the world," the man whom President Roosevelt displaced in the White House asserted none the less "that the most vital realism in all our relations requires that we keep out of these wars unless the Western Hemisphere is attacked.

But on the domestic front, Hoover declared "we have to fight." Citing "warnings" which he said could be found in "the fate of democracy of Europe," he asserted that totalitarian government arose there after the structure of liberty was weakened by "starry-eyed men who believed they could plan and force the economic life of the people."

And in America, he said, "we have been following the suicide road for liberty that led to disaster in Europe."

Attitude on War

The importance which Hoover placed upon the foreign policy section of his speech was stressed by the fact that it was the last section he finished. In it he apparently undertook to set forth an answer to one of the most thorny problems which has faced the convention—what formal attitude to take toward war.

Discarding isolation as impossible, whether it be economic, moral or emotional, Hoover said that "there are shifting dangers in which the nation should have common counsel that we may have national unity."

Then, for himself, he left open the door for cooperation between the Roosevelt administration and its Republican opposition by saying that when the party has chosen its leader in a few days "the president will be able to secure from him the views of our party upon those transcendent questions."

The nation's foreign policy, Hoover said, should be based upon "calm realism," the first requirement of which, he said, "is not to exaggerate our immediate dangers." Other aspects of such a policy he described as including "competent preparedness" and facilitation of supplies and munitions "to those nations who are fighting for their freedom" provided such assistance "involves no action which takes us into war" and that "as liberty lives by law we must act within the law."

Hope Is in Democracy

Hoover said "it is nonsense that we cannot defend freedom here even if the old world fails." And to this he added that "the hope of mankind and the hope of civilization is that democracy survive on this continent."

"Those who advocate war should never forget one thing," he added. "The first necessity of any great war is to set up a dictatorship. France and England were compelled to do so. But with our already weakened structure of liberty and the fabulous national debt we shall have, and the mania for power of the New Deal, we would be generations in restoring free men in America."

In crisp, sharp sentences he called upon his party to lead American in "seven stern tasks" of preparation for a future in which much of the world outside the United States will "long continue" to be dominated by "dictatorships, totalitarian economics and militarism."

War Only If Attacked

He advocated foreign policies "that keep us out of war unless we are attacked."

"We should facilitate all nations fighting for their freedom in procuring materials and munitions," he declared, "but subject to definite limitations which keep us out of war."

He said Republicans would "welcome" President Roosevelt as a third term candidate; he recommended putting into circulation at home and abroad the nineteen billions of "dead gold" in this country; he endorsed the "principle of protection for labor, the farmers, the old and destitute; he called for an increase in national income to 100 billion dollars and a reduction in federal spending as an attack on the national debt and deficit financing.

In discussing Europe, Hoover said totalitarian governments there were preceded by "so-called liberals" or "totalitarian liberals" who "politically controlled credit, prices, and production of industry, farmer and labor."

They "devalued, pump-primed and inflated," he said, and they met "every failure" by employing that "handmaiden of power named 'gimme a billion, quick.'"

Credit Undermined

When unemployment became chronic, he said, the government credit was undermined, the resulting confusions "rang down the curtain upon liberty."

Of the third term he said that "certainly the New Deal has not been allergic to power. And now fed on power they demand a third term for Mr. Roosevelt."

"That is not a mere violation of tradition," Hoover said. "It is a violation of a fundamental restraining upon power in this republic. But we Republicans would welcome Mr. Roosevelt as a candidate. For this battle must be fought out under the guns of debate."

"Seven Stern Tasks"

The "seven stern tasks" which he said must be undertaken if the nation is to be prepared were these:

"First. We must restore and revitalize liberty in America.

"Second. We must restore and rebuild morals in government.

"Third. We must restore decent life and living to one-third of our farmers and workers, who have been chronically submerged by the New Deal.

"Fourth. We must restore competence to government.

"Fifth. We must prepare this nation to defend the Western Hemisphere.

"Sixth. We must develop and maintain foreign policies that keep us out of these wars unless we are attacked. We should facilitate all nations fighting for freedom in procuring materials and munitions, but subject to definite limitations which keep us out of war.

"Seventh. We must recall our people from the flabbiness of the New Deal. We must reestablish stamina, character and ideals. We must regenerate hope and confidence in America."

No Reference to Party

Hoover accused the New Deal—a term which he used throughout his speech so that he made virtually no references to the Democratic party—of incompetence in its choice of government officials, in its fiscal policies, in its "purchase of three-quarters of the whole world's gold supply," in agriculture, in relief and in national defense.

"Mr. Roosevelt," he said, "recently broadcast an alibi that preparedness had been neglected by Republican administrations.

"In the six years of peaceful world outlook before the New Deal," the former president continued, "we had spent about 680 million a year on our preparedness. As a matter of fact Mr. Roosevelt considered we were spending too much on it. He supported the Democratic platform in 1932 which implied that. And in 1934 he drastically reduced our defense to 550 million, lopping off twenty millions from the air corps alone. And that year he reduced the number of commissioned naval graduates by one-half."

Hoover said that "Nazi-ism and our New Deal both rose to power in 1933" and since then "Republicans in Congress supported repeated increases in defense appropriations until they reached 1,400 million a year."

In "these six years," he continued, "the New Deal has spent 6.2 billions" yet "after all that expenditure we are told we are wholly unprepared to defend ourselves."

The drive for preparedness, he said, "is another battle which America better not lose. If we are to achieve preparedness we must have a chance in our national administration."

Financial Views

Of "deficits, debts, inflations and their spawn of managed currency," Hoover said that "they have been the curse of the earth ever since the last war," and "they are inscribed on the tombstone of every fallen democracy."

Hoover said that in the United States "it is easy to prove that the people are fearful of the New Deal."

"The evidence of their fears and loss of confidence is when they postpone the building of homes," he declared. "It shows when they fail to improve and construct factories to produce the new goods to which science and invention beckon our energies. x x x

"There can be a free economy in America which releases the productive energies of men. Or there can be a dictated economy. These cannot be mixed."

Of the administration's gold-buying policy, Hoover said that "we have buried nineteen billions mostly in a hole at Fort Knox."

"Unless we quickly restore the vitality of this pile of dead gold, this nation will fane a loss of the whole nineteen billion of it. We should start by putting it in circulation at home. We should start putting it in circulation abroad by swapping it for useful metals which we do not ourselves produce. We could far better have many years' stock of manganese, nickel, tungsten and tin than the so-called precious metals. These we may need for national defense."

CHEERFUL CANADIANS ARE OFF TO ENGLAND

Waving a hearty farewell to their native Canada, these soldiers of a Canadian division are bound from an unnamed Canadian port for service in the British Isles. Many Canadians have already landed in England, prepared to defend the mother country against the threatened blitzkrieg.

Japan To Have "Monroe Doctrine"

Tokyo, June 26 (Wednesday) (AP) — The newspaper Asahi reported today that Japan shortly would issue a sweeping pronouncement amounting to an Oriental Monroe Doctrine warning all powers against interference of any kind in all territories in East Asia.

The newspaper said Japan now is prepared to establish and guarantee autonomy in East Asia.

The proposed pronouncement, it said, would apply to Italy Germany and Great Britain as well as neutrals in the European conflict.

The newspaper reported the new policy would oppose the transfer of territories or alteration of the status qua in East Asia either through cessation or actual force.

Maryland Swings Toward Vandenberg

PHILADELPHIA, June 25 (AP)—Support for Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) on at least the second and third ballots began developing today among the sixteen delegates from Maryland to the Republican national convention.

Pledged to Dewey as a result of the state's presidential preference primary in which he was the only candidate, the sixteen Maryland votes will be cast as a unit for the New York prosecutor on the first ballot.

Thereafter, said Former Gov. Harry Nice, the delegation was expected to divide.

The big change, he said, would come on the second ballot with thirteen votes going to Willkie and three to Vandenberg. Then, he said, on the third, Vandenberg would pick up two more leaving eleven for Willkie.

Nice said his forecasts were based upon an assumption that Dewey strength would not be sufficient on the first and second ballots to warrant carrying on his support from Maryland. Under custom the state's delegates recognizing the primary results would support Dewey so long as they "conscientously felt" he had a chance of nomination.

Two Men Convicted Of $30,110 Theft

CINCINNATI, June 25. (AP)—Their trial terminating abruptly without defense testimony, Elmer Whitt, 30, of Columbus and Ivan Phillips, 33, Marion, O., were convicted today of taking $30,110 from the Avondale branch of the Central Trust Co., May 28.

Life imprisonment automatically became the penalty when Judge Dudley Miller Outcalt omitted any recommendation of mercy. Both men had waived jury trial.

Whitt and Phillips were arrested a few hours after the robbery when they called at a downtown garage for a car they had left for servicing. Garage attendants had found $2,000 in packaged currency on the car-floor. Approximately $28,000 was found in the secret-compartment of another vehicle they abandoned in their flight.

Both were identified by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation as the principals involved in the robbery of the bank of South Charleston, W. Va., last year.

G.O.P. Platform

Minor Point Protested

Landon asserted that there was no objection in the full committee to the part of the plank dealing with policy but that one member had protested "a very minor point" relating to a statement about the cost of the World War to the United States.

The plank was understood to contain a statement that: "The Republican party stands for Americanism, preparedness and peace."

This was understood to have been followed by a statement that the Democratic party stands for unpreparedness and tactics threatening toward war.

In its other phases, the plank was said by informed persons to include a provision for defending the Monroe Doctrine.

Earlier Landon had stalked wearily out of a meeting of a platform subcommittee which he heads and announced that his group had come to an agreement on the substance of the plank. He said it "takes into consideration changing world conditions," intimating that it was broad enough in scope to permit latitude in future action. He gave a negative reply to a question as to whether it would tie the presidential candidate to a "dogmatic statement."

"Punch" in Declaration

Striving to put "punch" into the declaration, the platform committee sent the plank back to Landon's group earlier in the day after it heard read a substitute proposal sponsored by C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois.

This proposal criticized the New Deal in blunt language on the ground that it had failed to build up national defenses over the last seven years. It was charged that "vicious attacks" on business had weakened the defense structure and had lowered the morale of the people.

The Brooks plan also called for "a strong and vigorous policy of national defense" with military forces "so strong that no other power shall ever be able to set foot on American soil."

On the other hand, it urged that no move be made "for the purpose of interfering in European or Asiatic conflicts."

The Brooks proposal carried no reference, direct or indirect, to aid to Great Britain or the Allies, differing in this respect from the original plank which had been drafted for consideration of the platform group.

This latter plank extended sympathy to oppressed people, advocating that "the government, in the future as in the past, acting as a neutral and not as a aggressor, will extend sympathy and aid and will permit aid and comfort to be extended to such peoples as is consistent with the law of nations and the law of the land."

Several committee members said that this declaration was being preserved in the new draft, the more forceful language of the Brooks proposal being added in condemning the Roosevelt administration.

French Government Plans To Move

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, June 26 — (Wednesday) — (AP) — Reports received at the Spanish border tonight said the French government is planning to move to Clarmont-Ferrand, 170 miles north of the Mediterranean in south central France.

The Spanish Embassy in France announced it was transferring to a locality near there.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

France's cup of defeat is made the more bitter by Winston Churchill's formal charge that the Petain ministry broke solemn assurances to Britain in agreeing to surrender the French fleet to German and Italian conquerors.

Yet that does not solve the mystery of where the French battlecraft actually are, or how important a factor they will prove in the continuing war between Britain and the Continental Axis allies.

"The safety of Great Britain and the British empire is powerfully though not decisively affected by what happens to the French fleet," Churchill said.

Whether that covers lack of information in London as to what the commanders and crews of French warcraft intend to do on their own initiative, or is designed to mask the real status of the French fleet from German and Italian high commands, can only be conjectured. It is a definite British warning, however, to such French warships and merchant craft as are still at sea that if they attempt to comply with surrender orders it will be at their peril.

Belittles Petain Excuse

Churchill brushed aside in advance the excuse the Petain ministry might be expected to offer for the alleged failure to live up to French commitments against permitting the French fleet to fall in German hands under any circumstances. Lacking any but the British version of the Franco-German armistice terms, it seems possible that the French negotiators accepted at face value the German pledge to intern the vessels, if surrendered, and not to use them in the war against Great Britain.

"We know the value of that (German promise)," Churchill commented, jerringly.

Nevertheless, the fact that victorious Germany did make that commitment to France could have significance. It could be an indication of the nature of the campaign Hitler is mapping against England, his only remaining foe-in-arms in Europe.

What Churchill has styled the "battle of Britain" is as yet a seize. Nazi air raiding over England and increasing activity by Nazi planes, submarines and other torpedo craft against British shipping mark the first skirmishes of the final struggle for mastery between British sea power and German air power.

Plan Attack on England

There have been hints, however, that in the wide Fjords of Nazi-conquered Norway and perhaps elsewhere the German high command is carefully rehearsing a triple-phase technique for pressing the war on England. A combination of German sea, air and land power is being drilled for swift action, according to these reports.

In neutral military judgment, there is meaning in the recent spotting by British aircraft of the Nazi battleship Scharnhorst off the coast of Norway. It suggests that the Germans are organizing for a quick night thrust by the navy, army and air force at some selected point in the British isles to establish bases if not to attempt invasion in force of England.

A Nazi attempt to establish air or submarine bases in Ireland would answer the question of German strategy. It would mean almost certainly that Hitler had elected first to attempt starvation of England rather than invasion.

And that purpose also may be indicated by the German armistice pledge not to use French naval craft, if surrendered, in the war on England. Had Berlin contemplated an English invasion "blitzkrieg," surrendered French battleships would have been too valuable for protection of Nazi troop transports to have permitted any question to arise as to what use Germany might make of them.

Ford Will Not Make Airplane Engines

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP)—Government negotiations with Henry Ford for the mass production of airplane engines collapsed today.

William S. Knudsen of the National Defense Commission announced that Ford's refusal to manufacture engines for Great Britain had forced cancellation of plans for early mass production of Rolls Royce motors by the Ford Motor Company.

Mines Reported Laid by United States at Both Ends of Panama Canal

Heavy Railroad Artillery Said To Have Been Moved into Position; Washington Issues Denial

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP) — The Daily News, in a copyrighted article tonight said that the United States had mined both entrances to the Panama Canal, had rushed heaviest railroad artillery to the Atlantic side of the zone and had placed the zone's defense forces on virtually a war footing.

The article, written by Lowell Limpus under a Panama dateline, said that with 30,000 men under arms, military authorities called the maneuvers an "emergency rehearsal."

Predict "Real Trouble"

"But with intense activity still continuing," the article said, "qualified observers believe the army was getting ready for real trouble on short notice."

"The mine laying fleet moved out on both sides of the isthmus yesterday immediately after the big Italian liner, Conte Biancamano, was shifted from a position from which its passengers and crew could have watched the proceedings," the article continued.

"The army's new mine planter, Niles, accompanied by a number of tugs and smaller craft which have been transformed into temporary mine layers, went into action on the Pacific side before the Biancamano had entered the canal proper, while the mine layer Graham and accompanying craft finished most of the job on the Atlantic side before the liner made its appearance and anchored there this afternoon.

Shipping Warned

"Meanwhile, guard ships took stations outside the mine fields evidently to warn approaching vessels. Rigid restrictions were suddenly clamped down on the movement of smaller craft.

"There was still no knowledge here of reports that the fleet had been ordered from its Hawaii station to the canal.

"The two batteries of huge fourteen - inch railway guns shifted from the Pacific side will be able to back up the great coastal defense rifles in the forts defending the Atlantic entrance to the canal, adding immeasurably to the strength of that side of the isthmus."

No New Mines Laid War Department Says

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP)—War department officials said tonight that controlled mines were maintained constantly about the entrances of the Panama canal but that no new mines had been laid there recently.

Department press officers, who said they had checked the highest sources here, expressed the opinion that army mine layers reported in operation off the canal zone yesterday were servicing existing installations.

The controlled mines are operated by electricity from shore, they said, and are protected by coast artillery against being swept up by an enemy fleet. The mines must be checked regularly, the officers said, and repaired or replaced in case they are out of order.

As to reports that the heaviest railroad artillery in the canal zone had been rushed to the Atlantic side, the officers said they had no information on this but that canal defense forces were engaged in maneuvers almost constantly.

Within the last year the canal garrison has been strengthened by additional artillery—especially anti-aircraft guns—fighting planes and infantry.

The canal, which enables the United States fleet to move from one ocean to the other quickly, is considered vital to the nation's defense. Army planners say it is most vulnerable to air attack and sabotage. They contend that, to protect it against being put out of commission by aerial bombardment, the hemisphere must be kept free of enemy bases.

KEEPS FRANCE IN WAR

Gen. Charles de Gaulle

Under Secretary of War in the war cabinet of former Premier Paul Reynaud, General Charles de Gaulle formed a "French National Committee" in London to continue the war against Germany. The Petain government of France stripped him of his rank for combining the peace with Hitler, but American support for the government-in-exile was foreseen.

Destination of U. S. Fleet a Mystery

HONOLULU, June 25 (AP) — Perplexity mingled with anxiety today as this mid-Pacific fortress awaited word of the destination of many units of the United States fleet which put to sea unexpectedly under sealed orders.

Families of officers and enlisted men alike, left behind after hasty farewells yesterday, were uncertain as to the destination of husbands and fathers.

What indications there were in official naval circles here and in Washington maintaining strict secrecy, still pointed to the Panama Canal as possibly the next rendezvous for the gray "battle wagons."

The warships, here, at Hilo and Lahaina roads, pulled their anchors, put to sea and soon were out to sight.

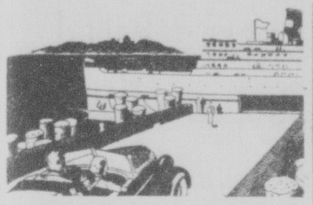

Pearl Harbor, scene of much activity since the 1940 maneuvers started in April, was somewhat deserted. The battleships Colorado, West Virginia and Arizona remained, and it was reported the Hawaiian detachment of about thirty vessels would continue in these waters.

Training Child Correctly Is Real Problem

Many Parents Are Now Taking Their Jobs Seriously

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

I have been impressed with the increasing number of letters like the following. They indicate that many of my readers take their job as parents very seriously—some too seriously, perhaps.

"Dear Dr. Myers: Your column has greatly interested me and especially now that we have our first baby, a three months old son. We hope to give him the finest training we can in order to prepare him for the life that he must carry on by himself.

"Both of us clearly understand our position as parents and realize that a child doesn't begin his education when he begins in school, but as soon as he arrives in this world, that his habits begin to take shape and that his pre-school training is the foundation for his later education.

Wants All Matter

"I, as a mother, would like to have you send me every bit of information which you think will help me in training my boy in the best possible way—concerning discipline, the proper kinds of toys to be used at the various stages, nursery rhymes (source for such); a list of stories and how and when they should be introduced to the child; or anything else you think I should have to guide me. I enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope."

I sent her a list of books and pamphlets, marking those she should read first. I also sent a graded list of playthings, nursery rhymes, stories and the like, most of which she will not need for many more months. I advised her to try to let the child develop normally but to write me later as problems arose which puzzled her. Judging from the letters I receive, hundreds and hundreds of mothers in the United States and Canada are trying hard to be the very best posible mothers.

Young Provider

In the case below, it seems to me the mother showed insight, sympathy and good sense.

"My son, three and a half years old, came to me the other day carrying a chicken (dead) by the feet and said, 'Here's a chicken for dinner, Mamma.' The chicken was a young one and sickly. I was so shocked I couldn't say anything for a minute. Sonny looked so innocent. He didn't seem to think he had done anything wrong. He had seen his daddy kill chickens and he seemed proud of the fact that he had killed a chicken for his mother. I didn't punish him. I simply said, 'Oh, Sonny, that's only a baby chick, and it was sick; never kill chickens—only Daddy kills chickens for us.'"

As I wrote this mother, it would be well to supervise this child more hereafter when he is exposed to such creatures until he learns a proper attitude toward them.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. "We are very much interested in the subject of reading to children. We started reading from very simple picture-story books to our son when he was a year and a half old. Now at three his enunciation is excellent and he uses very good grammar. Please send your reading list for babies and young children. A self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp is enclosed."

A. It was sent, as hundreds of others have been. Many parents have been writing me of the good effects they have observed from reading to the young child.

Training Child Correctly Is Real Problem

Many Parents Are Now Taking Their Jobs Seriously

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

I have been impressed with the increasing number of letters like the following. They indicate that many of my readers take their job as parents very seriously—some too seriously, perhaps.

"Dear Dr. Myers: Your column has greatly interested me and especially now that we have our first baby, a three months old son. We hope to give him the finest training we can in order to prepare him for the life that he must carry on by himself.

"Both of us clearly understand our position as parents and realize that a child doesn't begin his education when he begins in school, but as soon as he arrives in this world, that his habits begin to take shape and that his pre-school training is the foundation for his later education.

Wants All Matter

"I, as a mother, would like to have you send me every bit of information which you think will help me in training my boy in the best possible way—concerning discipline, the proper kinds of toys to be used at the various stages, nursery rhymes (source for such); a list of stories and how and when they should be introduced to the child; or anything else you think I should have to guide me. I enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope."

I sent her a list of books and pamphlets, marking those she should read first. I also sent a graded list of playthings, nursery rhymes, stories and the like, most of which she will not need for many more months. I advised her to try to let the child develop normally but to write me later as problems arose which puzzled her. Judging from the letters I receive, hundreds and hundreds of mothers in the United States and Canada are trying hard to be the very best posible mothers.

Young Provider

In the case below, it seems to me the mother showed insight, sympathy and good sense.

"My son, three and a half years old, came to me the other day carrying a chicken (dead) by the feet and said, 'Here's a chicken for dinner, Mamma.' The chicken was a young one and sickly. I was so shocked I couldn't say anything for a minute. Sonny looked so innocent. He didn't seem to think he had done anything wrong. He had seen his daddy kill chickens and he seemed proud of the fact that he had killed a chicken for his mother. I didn't punish him. I simply said, 'Oh, Sonny, that's only a baby chick, and it was sick; never kill chickens—only Daddy kills chickens for us.'"

As I wrote this mother, it would be well to supervise this child more hereafter when he is exposed to such creatures until he learns a proper attitude toward them.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. "We are very much interested in the subject of reading to children. We started reading from very simple picture-story books to our son when he was a year and a half old. Now at three his enunciation is excellent and he uses very good grammar. Please send your reading list for babies and young children. A self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp is enclosed."

A. It was sent, as hundreds of others have been. Many parents have been writing me of the good effects they have observed from reading to the young child.

Convention Temper Is Food for Inspiration

THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION got off to a fine start with the brilliant but logical keynote address of the able young governor of Minnesota, Harold E. Stassen. There was plenty of enthusiasm in evidence but it was notably tempered with a sense of duty and responsibility. The outstanding phase of the gathering is the reflection of sincerity and of seriousness among the delegates. There is plainly to be detected a feeling that this is a momentous affair, fraught with obligations reaching out beyond purely partisan considerations and affecting the welfare of the country, its ideals, its traditions and its future.

Stasson dynamically posited the clear need of the hour that "the role of government must be that of an aid to private enterprise, and not a substitute for it." Also he struck the mark by declaring forthrightly that the "saddest chapter of the last four years" is that the existing administration has "turned its gaze upon a third term" instead of the "national welfare." If, as heretofore repeatedly noted in these columns, Roosevelt should sense the temper of the people, including many thousands of Democrats, that he should abjure the third term ambition, he would overnight achieve the unity so deplorably lacking and resolve the perplexities and uncertainties now obtaining.

Another outstanding aspect of the convention is the evidence presented that it is "any man's convention" so far as the nominations are concerned. The shrewdest political wiseacres are unable to fathom the outcome of the selections, albeit all of them have been obliged to sense the surging of the Willkie boom. It is, clearly, an unbossed convention with the old-time politician and the old-fashioned political maneuvering slipping into the limbo of the past, which is a good thing. Thus there is every indication that the choices of this gathering, as well as its expressions of policy, will sententiously voice the sentiments of the people represented. It provides a gratifying sharp contrast to the bossism that has been experienced for the last several years.

Significantly vociferous was the thunderous and united negatives roared out by the delegates in response to the rhetorical questions pronounded by the keynoter as to whether the national administration, with its palpable mistakes and failures, should be continued. There was to be sensed in that a complete absence of any feeling that Roosevelt support is essential now for the solution of any of the critical problems facing the nation, simply because grave doubt and uncertainty exist as to what the administration policies are or what they will be.

Another unmistakable registration of sentiment was impressed by the vehement negative shouted against the proposal of the president to conscript the boys and girls of the country and force them to enter training camps, which, as the keynoter asserted, "was the method of Hitler and Mussolini and Stalin," and is "not the American way." Other repercussions of this objection are yet to be heard and in no uncertain terms.

The temper of this convention thus far manifested is a source of hope and inspiration for the country in its hour of grave crisis. In common language, the country is in a terrible fix. Here, it is to be believed, will be found the way to lead it out of that plight and bring about a resolution of the weighty problems with which it is now confronted, many of which have been so long unsolved.

The Sorry Future Of the French

NOT THE LEAST PROBLEM put before the world by the conquest of France by Hitler is that of the nature of the political future of the French republic. Is France now to go totalitarian? That would be following the fashion of Germany, Italy and Spain, its neighbors, none of which is longer negligible.

And if it is to be the totalitarian thing for France, what kind of autocracy? Is it to be the Nazism of Hitler, the Fascism of Mussolini and Franco or the Communism of Stalin?

For a time at least it is fair to assume that some one will be in charge of France who will conform to Hitler's policies. There will be no short working days and short working weeks in France for quite a spell. Labor strikes, with which France has abounded, will be under interdict. The Frenchman, notably individualistic, is booked for much painful regimentation.

However, France, always a fertile field for agitators, will not change fundamentally in its political prejudices. The radicals can be expected to begin building up political forces against the Nazi influence and in the fullness of time will seek to impose on France some other brand of autocracy.

Is War the Greatest Goal of Mankind?

BECAUSE of what has happened in Europe during the last year, it has become the fashion to mix pity with some slight flavor of contempt when speaking of the bungling of the democracies. Sometimes one hears the words "effete," "ineffectual," and so forth, applied to them, these being words incidentally, which the dictators are prone to use in the same connection.

There is nothing to admire in the tendency to parrot such words. "Effete" means worn out and barren. Democracy is not effete. It remains, as always, the sole means of effectuating the ultimate purposes for which governments—all governments—are instituted among men: Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Tyrants cannot confer liberty on those they govern and, without liberty, there is no happiness for the civilized man.

What has been proved in Europe is only that democracy is relatively ineffectual in making war. Democracy is at a disadvantage when it must deal with aggression by one-man governments.

That is all the truer now because of the nature of modern war—the mechanized speed of its onslaught and its industrialization. The dictator can prepare faster, because his single will determines the time for dropping experimentation with improved weapons and going into mass production. And, with modern weapons, he can strike faster and harder than ever before.

However, that is no new discovery. The democracies found in the World war they had to ape some of the methods of dictatorship—it was termed autocracy then—in order to organize for war as effectively as their opponents. And they are rediscovering it now, in some cases too late.

But does that prove democracy to be effete, outworn and outmoded? It does not, unless one agrees with the dictators that war is the fulfillment of man's highest destiny, the supreme purpose of government.

Where Caution May Tell in the End

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S STATEMENT that British combat planes have been taking two enemy ships for one and upon occasion, notably at Dunkerque, three or four for one, points to a difference in warfare as between Germany and British which still persists despite the reverses which have come to the English.

That difference is Germany's carelessness of life in its hurried aggression and Britain's life saving measures in working for a prolongation of Hitler's attack and therefore his final defeat.

The Germans have some good planes and pilots, of course. But the British assert by the test of hostilities that their own are considerably better and that therefore the British air arm, though smaller, will outlast the Nazis.

Germany's method, according to report, is to have highly trained leaders of air squadrons with followers not so well trained and often mere boys. Thus Germany is able to put great numbers of planes into the air on the "follow the leader" plan. Britain's pilots are individually highly trained and in combat with Germany's less trained force show up better.

Whether this will counterbalance Germany's heavy advantage in numbers may be put to the final test at any time.

Big Stick and Less Bluster Needed

IN ADDITION to hard work in preparation for possible war, observes the Cincinnati Times-Star, "it would be entirely in order for America to show a little more common sense in the handling of its international relations."

It would be, indeed, for the reason that, as pointed out by the Ohio newspaper, we have, in recent years, "been blustering around the world, vehement, abusive and unarmed. In the hard and dangerous times upon which we are entering, it seems that we should be both a great deal more polite and a great deal stronger than we have been."

In other words, as Theodore Roosevelt said, we should "speak softly and carry a Big Stick." Our handicap here is that we have failed to provide ourselves with the Big Stick.

Who says this is not a land of opportunity when a radio quiz program pays $11 for the answer to a question like this: "What is the name of the person whose initials are C. C., who attracted the attention of a queen and is credited with discovering America?"

The National Association of Penmanship Teachers reveals that poor penmanship cost American business $80,000,000 last year. Imagine that! Who got it?

No matter how the war turns out, most decent people—probably all of them—are hoping Mussolini's carrion feast chokes him.

It seems as if this blitzkrieg business has left the one time Unspeakable Turk speechless.

Your Own North Star

By MARSHALL MASLIN

You look up from the warm dark earth and search in the great tangle of stars for one familiar constellation.

There is no moon to dim those myriad points of light. You see them all in this luminous night. There lies the Milky Way across your heaven. There shine the Seven Sisters, though you may not be able to count them all. There's a red star and a blue star and a green one, but you seek the Giant Dipper that hangs above the little earth.

Marshall Maslin

You find it. First the handle with three stars—Benthasch and Mizar and Alioth, then the Dipper itself, and Megrez, Phaed, Merak and Dubhe, and leap into the spaces and come to the steady North Star that is the end of your quest.

That's the only way I can find the North Star. I seek the dipper and I find Merak and Dubhe and from them I find the star that counts the most, that tells me my way and has brought so many a sailor out of trial and into his home port at last.

There are so many stars, there are so many little points of light; there is so much advice and so many theories about how a man should live and the way he should go. And though he have a North Star in his own breast, it is sometimes so dim that, with all his wayward searching, he cannot always find it surely.

He needs those two other points to sight his soul upon. In the heavens are Merak and Dubhe. In himself must be Wisdom and Courage. In himself he should have these, or Faith and Patience. Or Strength and Understanding. Or Kindness. I do not know which pair of these qualities a man needs most if he is to come at last to his own North Star—but I am sure they are among these seven points of light, and that two of these point straight to the sturdy Truth he is so bent on finding.

French Weakness Seen As Caused By Divided Views

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

CHICAGO, June 25—"Something is rotten in the State of Denmark"—and now perhaps, in France. Not enough facts have come out of that stricken country to get even a shadowy opinion of what it is. But, regardless of the undoubted superiority of the German strength in guns and equipment and giving due regard to the crushing power of the new mechanized and motorized equipment, the collapse of all French resistance in so short a time simply can't be explained except by soft spots in the French command.

Hugh Johnson

Unlike Other Areas

The territory over which this headlong rout took place is unlike many areas of campaign. It has been a path of conquest and a battleground since the beginning of recorded history. Every hill and fold of ground is known. Its military strength or weakness proved over and over again, its features mapped in intimate detail, not only on paper but in the minds of every competent officer in France. In this respect it is more like a checkerboard than a battlefield. There could be no "surprises of terrain."

The French army, except in the air and as to some classes of equipment, was very strong. In its complement of highly trained professional soldiers, many with war experience, it was much stronger than the German army.

Wrong Key

Some of our amateur military commentators say that the key to the puzzle is mistaken French reliance on the fixed fortifications of the Maginot Line and that the campaign proves such lines worthless. That is wrong. There was no assault here until that line was outflanked and taken from the rear. The Germans built and successfully relied on the somewhat different fortifications of the Siegfried Line. It is true that this aspect of the case shows a terrible blunder. But the blunder was solely in relying on Belgium and other nations to the north and leaving the left flank of that line bare to assault as the "paunch of the purser's sow."

There here is an added lesson for us—among doenzs of others in this war. In this double-crossing, treaty-breaking, lying world, no nation can risk its existence on any other or on anything but the strength of its own right arm and the courage, unity, loyalty and devotion of its own people.

Too Many Parties

But, even with all that said, we are left still groping for the cause of this complete collapse. For one thing, it shows the weakness of any democracy not based on a two-party system. There were more than twenty parties in the Reichstag—and in came Hitler. There were several in France—and in came Hitler through another and bloodier door. That is a lesson for us. We still retain two parties, but one of them has degenerated into a group of gimme pressure groups.

The principal cause of French weakness is beginning to seem to be its half-and-half division in both its army and its legislature between men with Communist and men with Fascist leanings. There is as yet no news of outright treachery but it is hard to explain the mushiness of French defense on any other basis.

Pure Poison

There is a third and false conclusion for us that is being preached by some of my columnar colleagues, and it is pure poison. It is that this war proves that democracies won't work in war, with an implication that we should forget this election, give autocratic authority to the power-seeking group of incompetents in Washington and perpetuate Hopkins, Morgenthau, Perkins and Ickes to stumble, fumble and blunder us into war and they to run it for us.

We proved in 1918 that our democracy could out-Hitler any German in war efficiency, but you've got to have competent leaders to do it.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicates, Inc.

THE GRAND CLIMAX OF THE MAGICIAN ACT

By MARK SULLIVAN

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—This Willkie movement is most remarkable. Here is a man who wasn't a Republican until some two years ago, who wasn't thought of as a presidential possibility until some eight weeks ago, who did not enter a single state primary; who didn't acquire a single delegate by the ordinary means—party caucuses and the like; who has not in this convention a single delegate who is obliged to vote for him.

Mark Sullivan

That is Mr. Willkie.

And here is this convention—the most un-bossed and un-led convention of either party in recent memory. It has hardly enough leadership to provide the yeast of organization, to enable it to coagulate, to "jell." When the times comes, only the high quality of the one thousand individual delegates will enable the convention to organize and function.

Not Deliverable

It is a convention in which there isn't one man who can deliver as much as five delegates to any other man. A convention in which the party's recent presidential candidate, Ex-Governor Landon, doesn't control as many as ten delegates—I quote a newspaper man's estimate. A convention in which hardly one delegate is under obligation to, or willing to, subordinate his personal judgment to the judgment of leaders, except as a leader appeals to reason. An exceptionally intelligent body of delegates, and exceptionally stable.

And here is this convention apparently completely tolerant of the notion of naming Mr. Willkie as the party's presidential nominee, certainly having no fixed resistance to nominating him; willing to consider and compare this outsider on equal terms with such orthodox and experienced leaders as Senator Taft, Senator Vandenberg and Mr. Dewey.

Personality the Answer

What is the mystery of Mr. Willkie? I suppose it's the mystery of personality—the juxtaposition of a given kind of men with a given set of conditions in the public mind. I summarize the answer of an intelligent woman:

"Mr. Willkie just happens to have the kind of personality that great masses of people like," she says. "By God's grace, he happens also to be a good man. He has the alluring and stirring quality of William Jennings Bryan—plus the education and discipline of mind that Bryan did not have. Men having this quality of getting masses of persons to follow him—such men often lend their talent to less than noble uses. In a period of prolonged distress, like the present, when such a man arises, he often leads his following toward destructive ends. Such a one was Huey Long.

Hasn't Made Good

"By great good luck for America, Huey Long was edged aside by Franklin Roosevelt, who took Long's following away from him, and led them to a higher level of aspiration. Just now the Messiah-seeking part of the people are coming to feel that Mr. Roosevelt hasn't been able to live up to the expectations which many of the people set up in their own minds. It isn't what the Messiah specifically promises. It is what the dream-indulging people set up as their own vision of what he will do.

"Just at this moment, when the Messiah-seekers are beginning to feel a little let down by Mr. Roosevelt's regime, at this moment along comes Mr. Willkie. He has all Mr. Roosevelt's power to inspire dreams—and vastly more than Mr. Roosevelt's ability to make dreams come true. He has all the liking for people that Mr. Roosevelt has, all the wish to please the people—but he has what Mr. Roosevelt never had, understanding of social and political principles, knowledge of how to make the economic machine work. He's a better Roosevelt—and the Republicans had better thank heaven for the gift.

People Disappointed

"All over the wrold, peoples are disappointed with old forms of democratic government, the parliaments and congresses. They are disappointed with the slowness of parliaments, their cumbersomeness, their inefficiency for meeting crises. Parliamentary France could not defend itself against one-man governed Germany.

Here in Mr. Wilkie you have a personality who satisfies the longing—but at the same time would scrupulously preserve democracy, would strengthen it and make it work better."

That is the argument for Mr. Willkie, as put by an intelligent and understanding woman.

Save As Well As Spend

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

The present federal debt limit of 45 billion dollars undoubtedly will be raised to around 50 billions in order to make it possible to provide new capital for the national defense program, as the current peace debt is virtually at the legal limit.

The cost of an adequate defense structure will reach incredible totals. In addition to raising the debt limit and taxes, it is certainly the duty of public officials of both parties to reduce government expenditures for other less essential purposes—even at the expense of pet political projects that have swallowed billions of the nation's wealth.

There is an inseparable relationship between national defense and national fiscal solvency. Each increase in taxes or debt must inevitably result in a steady lowering of a nation's resources. It is as important to learn to save as it is to spend when national emergencies demand it.

The defense program must be pushed with all speed. Similar speed should be shown in paring every nickel possible from the ordinary federal budget in order to release every available dollar of regular government income for legitimate defense needs. Every conceivable economy should at once be effected so that increases in taxes and debt may be held to the absolute minimum.

A sound fiscal policy is one of the most vital factors in a national defense program.

American Ballad Stresses a New National Mood

By EDWIN C. HILL

During the next four years, the presidency of the United States will be like the burden of Atlas on the shoulders of some aging man. Yet there is no less striving, hoping, yearning, dealing, contriving and fighting for the prize. These aspirants, with their Warwicks, say with Henry V, "If it be a sin to covet honor, I am the most offending soul alive."

Edwin C. Hill

One should read, "It Costs To Be President," by Henry L. Stoddard, to know and feel something of the terrific exactions of the presidency. Mr. Stoddard, former publisher of the New York Mail, and one of the most distinguished political reporters in our national history, has known every president from Grant to Hoover, has had intimate personal relations with several of them, and I am quite certain, has covered more national conventions than any other man.

Just Our Way

"Well may we ask," writes Mr. Stoddard, "why we dispose of our highest office in such a haphazard manner; why men who give their lives to public service are so often set aside for those who have not that experience. The only answer is that it is just our way. 'Spend and be spent in an endless crusade,' was Theodore Roosevelt's summary of a public career. He might have gone further and added that not always, when their day was done, have honors fallen to those who by service had earned them. Passion reigns for a moment . . .; it seeks a victim of an idol. That's politics. 'It costs to be president,' said Calvin Coolidge. So have others, who have occupied the White House, recorded their disillusion."

Touches Heart and Home

The Republicans break pace in opening this convention with that amazing "Ballad for Americans" which, in its radio rendering and phonograph recording, has searched out perhaps more homes and hearts than any musical composition of the year. It is a surging confluence of myriad tributaries of our national life and somehow makes little men and faltering voices bold and articulate. Walt Whitman, with his "democracy of these states," knows what this ballad means, if his shade is in attendance here.

Old Favorites

Mr. Stoddard knows well the deeper meanings of such intangibles as convention music. Describing a typical convention, he writes: "Bands at either end of the hall try to outdo one another in succession in filling it with enlivening sound. 'Dixie' is always popular with both parties; likewse 'A Hot Tme in the Old Town Tonight.' 'Over There' was a favorite, too, for several years after our men returned from that tragedy of tragedies abroad. 'Sidewalks of New York' was popular in 1924; more so in 1928; less so in 1932; tabooed by explicit instruction in 1936.

"Democrats have always been content with the music of the days Republicans now are. Time was, though, when 'Marching through Georgia,' 'Battle Hymn of the Republic,' 'Rally round the Flag Boys,' as well as other Civil war favorites provided all the music heard in Republican conventions, while a fife and drum corps in colorful Zouave attire, often marched through the aisles, enthusing delegates and spectators into a sort of revivalist furore.

"Happily, another day dawned with the turn of the century; the White House was then occupied for the last time by a soldier of the Civil war. Cleveland had been the one exception. Just the same, there was an unforgettable fervor and picturesqueness about these old conventions. They meant convictions, right or wrong; they meant loyalty and intensity.

"Everything has its day, however. Jazz, for a time suited everybody; now jazz, too, has gone."

Over Here Present Mood

I, too, remember when "Over There" was a convention set-piece. The mood now seems to be "Over Here," which, when you think of it, would do for a secondary title for this altogether unique and inspiring "Ballad for Americans." I have quoted Mr. Stoddard on convention songs not only to indicate the contrast between "Over There" and the "Ballad for Americans" but also to touch on a new national mood. One feels new loyalty and new unity stirring here.—Copyright, 1940, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Convention Temper Is Food for Inspiration

THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION got off to a fine start with the brilliant but logical keynote address of the able young governor of Minnesota, Harold E. Stassen. There was plenty of enthusiasm in evidence but it was notably tempered with a sense of duty and responsibility. The outstanding phase of the gathering is the reflection of sincerity and of seriousness among the delegates. There is plainly to be detected a feeling that this is a momentous affair, fraught with obligations reaching out beyond purely partisan considerations and affecting the welfare of the country, its ideals, its traditions and its future.

Stasson dynamically posited the clear need of the hour that "the role of government must be that of an aid to private enterprise, and not a substitute for it." Also he struck the mark by declaring forthrightly that the "saddest chapter of the last four years" is that the existing administration has "turned its gaze upon a third term" instead of the "national welfare." If, as heretofore repeatedly noted in these columns, Roosevelt should sense the temper of the people, including many thousands of Democrats, that he should abjure the third term ambition, he would overnight achieve the unity so deplorably lacking and resolve the perplexities and uncertainties now obtaining.

Another outstanding aspect of the convention is the evidence presented that it is "any man's convention" so far as the nominations are concerned. The shrewdest political wiseacres are unable to fathom the outcome of the selections, albeit all of them have been obliged to sense the surging of the Willkie boom. It is, clearly, an unbossed convention with the old-time politician and the old-fashioned political maneuvering slipping into the limbo of the past, which is a good thing. Thus there is every indication that the choices of this gathering, as well as its expressions of policy, will sententiously voice the sentiments of the people represented. It provides a gratifying sharp contrast to the bossism that has been experienced for the last several years.

Significantly vociferous was the thunderous and united negatives roared out by the delegates in response to the rhetorical questions pronounded by the keynoter as to whether the national administration, with its palpable mistakes and failures, should be continued. There was to be sensed in that a complete absence of any feeling that Roosevelt support is essential now for the solution of any of the critical problems facing the nation, simply because grave doubt and uncertainty exist as to what the administration policies are or what they will be.

Another unmistakable registration of sentiment was impressed by the vehement negative shouted against the proposal of the president to conscript the boys and girls of the country and force them to enter training camps, which, as the keynoter asserted, "was the method of Hitler and Mussolini and Stalin," and is "not the American way." Other repercussions of this objection are yet to be heard and in no uncertain terms.

The temper of this convention thus far manifested is a source of hope and inspiration for the country in its hour of grave crisis. In common language, the country is in a terrible fix. Here, it is to be believed, will be found the way to lead it out of that plight and bring about a resolution of the weighty problems with which it is now confronted, many of which have been so long unsolved.

The Sorry Future Of the French

NOT THE LEAST PROBLEM put before the world by the conquest of France by Hitler is that of the nature of the political future of the French republic. Is France now to go totalitarian? That would be following the fashion of Germany, Italy and Spain, its neighbors, none of which is longer negligible.

And if it is to be the totalitarian thing for France, what kind of autocracy? Is it to be the Nazism of Hitler, the Fascism of Mussolini and Franco or the Communism of Stalin?

For a time at least it is fair to assume that some one will be in charge of France who will conform to Hitler's policies. There will be no short working days and short working weeks in France for quite a spell. Labor strikes, with which France has abounded, will be under interdict. The Frenchman, notably individualistic, is booked for much painful regimentation.

However, France, always a fertile field for agitators, will not change fundamentally in its political prejudices. The radicals can be expected to begin building up political forces against the Nazi influence and in the fullness of time will seek to impose on France some other brand of autocracy.

Is War the Greatest Goal of Mankind?

BECAUSE of what has happened in Europe during the last year, it has become the fashion to mix pity with some slight flavor of contempt when speaking of the bungling of the democracies. Sometimes one hears the words "effete," "ineffectual," and so forth, applied to them, these being words incidentally, which the dictators are prone to use in the same connection.

There is nothing to admire in the tendency to parrot such words. "Effete" means worn out and barren. Democracy is not effete. It remains, as always, the sole means of effectuating the ultimate purposes for which governments—all governments—are instituted among men: Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Tyrants cannot confer liberty on those they govern and, without liberty, there is no happiness for the civilized man.

What has been proved in Europe is only that democracy is relatively ineffectual in making war. Democracy is at a disadvantage when it must deal with aggression by one-man governments.

That is all the truer now because of the nature of modern war—the mechanized speed of its onslaught and its industrialization. The dictator can prepare faster, because his single will determines the time for dropping experimentation with improved weapons and going into mass production. And, with modern weapons, he can strike faster and harder than ever before.

However, that is no new discovery. The democracies found in the World war they had to ape some of the methods of dictatorship—it was termed autocracy then—in order to organize for war as effectively as their opponents. And they are rediscovering it now, in some cases too late.

But does that prove democracy to be effete, outworn and outmoded? It does not, unless one agrees with the dictators that war is the fulfillment of man's highest destiny, the supreme purpose of government.

Where Caution May Tell in the End

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S STATEMENT that British combat planes have been taking two enemy ships for one and upon occasion, notably at Dunkerque, three or four for one, points to a difference in warfare as between Germany and British which still persists despite the reverses which have come to the English.

That difference is Germany's carelessness of life in its hurried aggression and Britain's life saving measures in working for a prolongation of Hitler's attack and therefore his final defeat.

The Germans have some good planes and pilots, of course. But the British assert by the test of hostilities that their own are considerably better and that therefore the British air arm, though smaller, will outlast the Nazis.

Germany's method, according to report, is to have highly trained leaders of air squadrons with followers not so well trained and often mere boys. Thus Germany is able to put great numbers of planes into the air on the "follow the leader" plan. Britain's pilots are individually highly trained and in combat with Germany's less trained force show up better.

Whether this will counterbalance Germany's heavy advantage in numbers may be put to the final test at any time.

Big Stick and Less Bluster Needed

IN ADDITION to hard work in preparation for possible war, observes the Cincinnati Times-Star, "it would be entirely in order for America to show a little more common sense in the handling of its international relations."

It would be, indeed, for the reason that, as pointed out by the Ohio newspaper, we have, in recent years, "been blustering around the world, vehement, abusive and unarmed. In the hard and dangerous times upon which we are entering, it seems that we should be both a great deal more polite and a great deal stronger than we have been."

In other words, as Theodore Roosevelt said, we should "speak softly and carry a Big Stick." Our handicap here is that we have failed to provide ourselves with the Big Stick.

Who says this is not a land of opportunity when a radio quiz program pays $11 for the answer to a question like this: "What is the name of the person whose initials are C. C., who attracted the attention of a queen and is credited with discovering America?"

The National Association of Penmanship Teachers reveals that poor penmanship cost American business $80,000,000 last year. Imagine that! Who got it?

No matter how the war turns out, most decent people—probably all of them—are hoping Mussolini's carrion feast chokes him.

It seems as if this blitzkrieg business has left the one time Unspeakable Turk speechless.

Your Own North Star

By MARSHALL MASLIN

You look up from the warm dark earth and search in the great tangle of stars for one familiar constellation.

There is no moon to dim those myriad points of light. You see them all in this luminous night. There lies the Milky Way across your heaven. There shine the Seven Sisters, though you may not be able to count them all. There's a red star and a blue star and a green one, but you seek the Giant Dipper that hangs above the little earth.

Marshall Maslin

You find it. First the handle with three stars—Benthasch and Mizar and Alioth, then the Dipper itself, and Megrez, Phaed, Merak and Dubhe, and leap into the spaces and come to the steady North Star that is the end of your quest.

That's the only way I can find the North Star. I seek the dipper and I find Merak and Dubhe and from them I find the star that counts the most, that tells me my way and has brought so many a sailor out of trial and into his home port at last.

There are so many stars, there are so many little points of light; there is so much advice and so many theories about how a man should live and the way he should go. And though he have a North Star in his own breast, it is sometimes so dim that, with all his wayward searching, he cannot always find it surely.

He needs those two other points to sight his soul upon. In the heavens are Merak and Dubhe. In himself must be Wisdom and Courage. In himself he should have these, or Faith and Patience. Or Strength and Understanding. Or Kindness. I do not know which pair of these qualities a man needs most if he is to come at last to his own North Star—but I am sure they are among these seven points of light, and that two of these point straight to the sturdy Truth he is so bent on finding.

French Weakness Seen As Caused By Divided Views

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

CHICAGO, June 25—"Something is rotten in the State of Denmark"—and now perhaps, in France. Not enough facts have come out of that stricken country to get even a shadowy opinion of what it is. But, regardless of the undoubted superiority of the German strength in guns and equipment and giving due regard to the crushing power of the new mechanized and motorized equipment, the collapse of all French resistance in so short a time simply can't be explained except by soft spots in the French command.

Hugh Johnson

Unlike Other Areas

The territory over which this headlong rout took place is unlike many areas of campaign. It has been a path of conquest and a battleground since the beginning of recorded history. Every hill and fold of ground is known. Its military strength or weakness proved over and over again, its features mapped in intimate detail, not only on paper but in the minds of every competent officer in France. In this respect it is more like a checkerboard than a battlefield. There could be no "surprises of terrain."

The French army, except in the air and as to some classes of equipment, was very strong. In its complement of highly trained professional soldiers, many with war experience, it was much stronger than the German army.

Wrong Key

Some of our amateur military commentators say that the key to the puzzle is mistaken French reliance on the fixed fortifications of the Maginot Line and that the campaign proves such lines worthless. That is wrong. There was no assault here until that line was outflanked and taken from the rear. The Germans built and successfully relied on the somewhat different fortifications of the Siegfried Line. It is true that this aspect of the case shows a terrible blunder. But the blunder was solely in relying on Belgium and other nations to the north and leaving the left flank of that line bare to assault as the "paunch of the purser's sow."

There here is an added lesson for us—among doenzs of others in this war. In this double-crossing, treaty-breaking, lying world, no nation can risk its existence on any other or on anything but the strength of its own right arm and the courage, unity, loyalty and devotion of its own people.

Too Many Parties

But, even with all that said, we are left still groping for the cause of this complete collapse. For one thing, it shows the weakness of any democracy not based on a two-party system. There were more than twenty parties in the Reichstag—and in came Hitler. There were several in France—and in came Hitler through another and bloodier door. That is a lesson for us. We still retain two parties, but one of them has degenerated into a group of gimme pressure groups.

The principal cause of French weakness is beginning to seem to be its half-and-half division in both its army and its legislature between men with Communist and men with Fascist leanings. There is as yet no news of outright treachery but it is hard to explain the mushiness of French defense on any other basis.

Pure Poison

There is a third and false conclusion for us that is being preached by some of my columnar colleagues, and it is pure poison. It is that this war proves that democracies won't work in war, with an implication that we should forget this election, give autocratic authority to the power-seeking group of incompetents in Washington and pepetuate Hopkins, Morgenthau, Perkins and Ickes to stumble, fumble and blunder us into war and they to run it for us.

We proved in 1918 that our democracy could out-Hitler any German in war efficiency, but you've got to have competent leaders to do it.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicates, Inc.

THE GRAND CLIMAX OF THE MAGICIAN ACT

By MARK SULLIVAN

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—This Willkie movement is most remarkable. Here is a man who wasn't a Republican until some two years ago, who wasn't thought of as a presidential possibility until some eight weeks ago, who did not enter a single state primary; who didn't acquire a single delegate by the ordinary means—party caucuses and the like; who has not in this convention a single delegate who is obliged to vote for him.

Mark Sullivan

That is Mr. Willkie.

And here is this convention—the most un-bossed and un-led convention of either party in recent memory. It has hardly enough leadership to provide the yeast of organization, to enable it to coagulate, to "jell." When the times comes, only the high quality of the one thousand individual delegates will enable the convention to organize and function.

Not Deliverable

It is a convention in which there isn't one man who can deliver as much as five delegates to any other man. A convention in which the party's recent presidential candidate, Ex-Governor Landon, doesn't control as many as ten delegates—I quote a newspaper man's estimate. A convention in which hardly one delegate is under obligation to, or willing to, subordinate his personal judgment to the judgment of leaders, except as a leader appeals to reason. An exceptionally intelligent body of delegates, and exceptionally stable.

And here is this convention apparently completely tolerant of the notion of naming Mr. Willkie as the party's presidential nominee, certainly having no fixed resistance to nominating him; willing to consider and compare this outsider on equal terms with such orthodox and experienced leaders as Senator Taft, Senator Vandenberg and Mr. Dewey.

Personality the Answer

What is the mystery of Mr. Willkie? I suppose it's the mystery of personality—the juxtaposition of a given kind of men with a given set of conditions in the public mind. I summarize the answer of an intelligent woman:

"Mr. Willkie just happens to have the kind of personality that great masses of people like," she says. "By God's grace, he happens also to be a good man. He has the alluring and stirring quality of William Jennings Bryan—plus the education and discipline of mind that Bryan did not have. Men having this quality of getting masses of persons to follow him—such men often lend their talent to less than noble uses. In a period of prolonged distress, like the present, when such a man arises, he often leads his following toward destructive ends. Such a one was Huey Long.

Hasn't Made Good

"By great good luck for America, Huey Long was edged aside by Franklin Roosevelt, who took Long's following away from him, and led them to a higher level of aspiration. Just now the Messiah-seeking part of the people are coming to feel that Mr. Roosevelt hasn't been able to live up to the expectations which many of the people set up in their own minds. It isn't what the Messiah specifically promises. It is what the dream-indulging people set up as their own vision of what he will do.

"Just at this moment, when the Messiah-seekers are beginning to feel a little let down by Mr. Roosevelt's regime, at this moment along comes Mr. Willkie. He has all Mr. Roosevelt's power to inspire dreams—and vastly more than Mr. Roosevelt's ability to make dreams come true. He has all the liking for people that Mr. Roosevelt has, all the wish to please the people—but he has what Mr. Roosevelt never had, understanding of social and political principles, knowledge of how to make the economic machine work. He's a better Roosevelt—and the Republicans had better thank heaven for the gift.

People Disappointed

"All over the wrold, peoples are disappointed with old forms of democratic government, the parliaments and congresses. They are disappointed with the slowness of parliaments, their cumbersomeness, their inefficiency for meeting crises. Parliamentary France could not defend itself against one-man governed Germany.

"Everywhere peoples are looking for a man, for what Carlyle called a 'can man.' This longing is dangerous, it may lead toward dictatorship. Here in Mr. Wilkie you have a personality who satisfies the longing—but at the same time would scrupulously preserve democracy, would strengthen it and make it work better."

That is the argument for Mr. Willkie, as put by an intelligent and understanding woman.

For myself, as Mr. Dooley said to Mr. Hennessy, "I dunno." Mr. Dooley said that in skepticism. I say it in simple ignorance. I literally don't know.—Copyright, 1940, New York Tribune, Inc.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Millard F. Tydings, Democrat, of Maryland

We are thinking of going home after having made these appropriations, knowing this foe—the coming depression—is over in Europe only awaiting the hour to strike, even if we stay out of the war * * * I conclude by saying that in my opinion if Congress goes home and leaves the country in the terrible conditions in which it will be if no financial reinforcement comes, it will be unfaithful to the American people, and will show a political unwisdom which will be rebuked at the polls wherever candidates who favored going home stand for re-election.

Two Young Ladies and a Professor Disagree on What Makes Two Young Ladies Look Smart

By WILLIE MAE ROUTTEN

"The bell rang," Dorothy hissed across the library table.

"Why bring that up?" Lorna stared gloomily at the book before her. "It's cruelty to dumb animals, that's what it is! Two tests in one day!"

"Come on, it won't do any good to moan and groan now. You should have studied last night." Dorothy scooped her books into her arms and headed for the door. Lorna gave her a withering look and followed, shuffling her feet disconsolately.

Lorna's eyes were half closed in speculation. "What do you suppose

Prof. Learner would say if I didn't come to his charming little class?"

"Nothing—if you were sick."

"You could tell him I was."

"I'm not that kind."

"It would only be a white lie."

"A little on the grayish side, if you ask me."

"Not if you look at it right." Lorna was tugging at the sleeve of Dorothy's jacket, "Wait a minutes."

They paused at a water fountain. Lorna talked while the other was drinking. "Consider it this way. If I go to history I'll flunk both tests. That would be especially hard on Prof. Learner—he thinks I know that history. Wouldn't it be better for me to cut the test than to disillusion him? Besides, I could study enough in the hour to pass the biology test, and make Dd. Richard happy, too." Lorna tried to spread her arms to show how simple the solution was, but the books interfered. The result was a juggling act.

Dorothy looked skeptical. "Could be—but I doubt it."

"Now, look, Dot, I——"

"Oh, all right; I'll do it. Don't have hysterics. But I want you to remember." Dorothy was affecting the tone of a martyr, "you'll be eternally in my debt . . . Here take these. Once I step inside that door for the exam I'll need them no more."

Lorna turned toward the stairs. She was humming as she walked into the art room.

"Well, if it isn't Lady Bookworm herself. Have you digested the entire book yet, dearie?" Dorothy stood in the doorway.

"Who let you out? Or didn't you take the test?" Lorna did not look up from her paper.

"Sure, I took it. I finished early, so Learner let me go."

"Was The Test Hard?"

"Was the test hard?"

"The test wasn't hard, but you couldn't have passed it. In the second place, I told him you were sick; so stay away from his room today."

The bell drowned Lorna's reply and she did not bother to repeat it.

When they reached the second floor Lorna waited on the stairs while Dorothy looked up and down the hall past the milling students. At a shrug of the other's shoulders Lorna slipped around the curve of the stairs and started down to the first floor.

"Pretty slick, the way we did that," she said as Dorothy came up to her.

The narrow hall that led to the science rooms was lined with showcases, filled with specimens preserved in alcohol. While frogs, whole fish, cat's brains and hearts, a dozen aquatic species in various stages of dissection and a lone, dusty armadilla shell.

"This atmosphere is so conducive to——" Lorna stopped abruptly at the door and stared open-mouthed at the figure behind the desk. "Saints be praised," she said.

"Will you please come in and take your places, girls." Prof. Learner was smiling at them. "I'm glad to see you, Miss Haynes. I missed you last period."

"I thought you could look sick," Dorothy whispered.

"I'm looking sick now; anyway, I feel sick."

Prof. Learner pushed back his hair and stood towering over the class.

"I know some of you are wondering why I am here, so I will relieve your anxiety. Dr. Richard was called out of town yesterday and asked me to meet his class. He did not have time to make out the questions for the test, so that will be postponed until he returns. After I take roll call you may leave." A murmur of delight ran through the classroom. Lorna was staring grimly at the wall, when she heard her name.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

Again and again, just when the home gardener comes to the conclusion that at least he has achieved a perfect, weedless lawn, the "fifth column" appears and trouble ensues. The fifth column of the home lawn is the spindly stem of the buckhorn, or narrow leaf plantain, a weed that persists in sowing "seeds of dissension" among the best of grasses.

Among the ways of controlling this weed are: pulling it up by hand after the ground has been softened by rain; cutting the main root of the plant well below the surface of the soil, and piercing each plant to the root with a sharp-pointed stick which has been dipped in sulphuric acid, carbolic acid, or gasoline.

As shown in today's Garden-Graph, the seed heads of buckhorn are atop long, spindly stems. It is a mistake to cut these stems with a lawn mower, for the blades of the mower merely strip the seeds from the stem and scatter them throughout the lawn.

When hand digging weeds from lawns, mark off strips about three feet wide with string and stakes. Then clear each strip of weeds before moving on to the next one.

Germans Take Time Out To Study Why Smoke Gets in Your Eyes

AP Feature Service

Berlin — Despite the war, Germans have opened a laboratory for supermicroscopy to study the tiniest agents of disease.

The supermicroscope, as simple to operate as a radio, uses electrons, instead of the light rays on which ordinary microscopes depend. Where instruments using light enlarge an image 2,000 times, sponsors say the supermicroscope magnifies 40,000 times within the instrument. A sharp original photograph can then be enlarged to more than 200,000 times the size of the original object.

There are three supermicroscopes in the laboratory on the outskirts of Berlin, and a fourth is being built.

German scientists are invited to use the laboratory's facilities in an effort to encourage centralized, practical research in medicine, biology and bacteriology and in the the fields of dust, smoke, color, the silicates and the like.

The supermicroscope was developed in its present form by Dr. Bodo von Borries and Dr. Ernst Ruska. It was first announced in 1938.

Industrial researchers, studying smoke and dust with the supermicroscope, have discovered they hold particles with a diameter of one five-millionth of an inch and smaller. Their form and structure were recognizable. These observations will be used in improving conditions of men working under dust or smoke conditions.

instrument containing a vacuum chamber. Images on a fluorescent glass screen inside are observed through three windows in the base.

Electrons are focused by magnetic fields somewhere in the manner that a glass lens focuses light rays. Electron wave lengths are hundreds of thousands of times smaller than the shortest wave length of light so that they show details too small to reflect light.

New Project Pleases

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 25 (AP)—Discussions leading to possible nation-wide extension of an airport clerical help project developed experimentally by the NYA at Parkersburg have been undertaken by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, State NYA Administrator Glenn S. Callaghan announced today.

He said Major A. B. McMullen of Washington, member of the airport section of the Bureau of Federal Airways, had inspected the project and expressed interest in its extension.

The project was started about six months ago. Twelve girls are being trained in a type of clerical work peculiar to airport needs. They keep complete records of all planes visiting the airport.

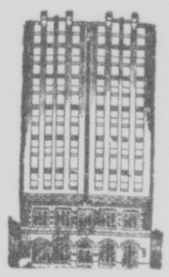

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX

Bill paused long enough to admire her when she came downstairs.

THE MERRIFIELD study on the second floor of the old mansion was a room 28 by 30 feet in dimensions, high ceilinged, lined with book cases on two sides and furnished with heavy chairs, rockers, and Mr. Merrifield's huge mahogany desk. The desk was before the fireplace, and even though this was late spring the butler had stirred up a little blaze just because it was customary, and because an old man is likely to feel any slight chill in the air after sundown. Two knots glimmered in the fireplace now, throwing shadows that danced about the big room in ghostly parade.

A tall bookcase jutted out from one end of the wide mantle, reaching the desk for convenience and forming a dark set-back nook in one corner of the big room. There Mr. Merrifield had caused to be placed a long couch, and there he frequently lay down for cat naps, resting a quarter-hour, half hour, or an hour as need be, to restore his surprising energies. A heavy afghan thrown there served to cover his feet and legs on such occasions.

Now, on this night of the play and the ball, he discovered after dinner that he was suddenly fatigued. He had been as excited as one of the youngsters about the doings in his home. He had three friends in to dinner, and so did a deal of talking. He knew that on this occasion he wanted to stay up past midnight. So he wisely decided to lie down a bit beforehand. He bade his friends make themselves at home on the front porch below, while he slipped off upstairs to the old couch in the private nook he loved so well.

"I have taken the liberty, Miss Gayle, to bring in two assistants this evening," the maid Maudie said, while helping Gayle dress. "You understand? We don't want it to happen again."

"Oh, yes, Mrs.—Maudie! I do hope nothing happens to mar this party. Any thievery could simply ruin—"

"Don't worry now. We'll be on guard. Please just relax and enjoy yourself and let us do any worrying for you." Mrs. Holmquist, called Maudie, was a kindly soul, Gayle knew. Gayle smiled her thanks.

It wasn't easy to relax, though.

Any party has a mass of last-second details. Any theater is a madhouse on opening night. With a play and a party planned for the same evening, and with herself acting in one and being hostess at the other, Gayle Dixon was fairly dying with energy and nerves.

Not that she didn't love it. She did. She enjoyed the excitement because she was young. Mrs. Holmquist had helped to make her even more beautiful than usual, in her white net evening gown. Her straw-colored hair was curled perfectly, her cheeks pink from excitement rather than from rouge. Bill, similarly busy, paused long enough to admire her when she came downstairs at seven.

"Chris-to-pher!" he breathed, staring.

"Something?" she pretended not to understand.

"Yes! Plenty!"

She pirouetted for him, like a model; then smiled and flickered her eyelids.

"Stop it!" he commanded. "A man can stand just so much. I may yet grab you by the hair and rush off to some mountain cave."

"Oh, how roman-tic!" she gushed, then ran on, laughing.

The two understood each other, in part at least. Bill had a moment of dejection there as he watched her go—Bill who had come to worship her, but who could not speak of his love. He wondered why he let promises and pride and loyalty and all those things interfere. He had mentioned a caveman—why in the devil didn't he do what any sensible cave man would have done, take her and damn the cost? But he shook his head. He had been hemmed in and tied by finer, civilized concepts. If some day he didn't explode!

Gayle went on to the kitchen, and in spite of herself she was excited anew by Bill's compliment. Bill was a handsome thing! Especially so tonight, in his trim tuxedo. In a little while she would be in a play with him and the play would enable her to linger in his arms again and be kissed by him as before—and held close. It was intensely moving, even though it was just a play.

But she could day dream no longer because Wallace, the cook, came up to help her go over the refreshments a last time. Poor Wallace took this big party seriously. He and his new helpers had personally baked and iced 1,700 little cakes (one for each anticipated guest and host tonight). They were iced in white, with a flower garden scene adoitly painted with colored icings, culinary spring songs in pink and blue and green.

"Precious!" Gayle told him, and meant it.

Besides which there was an abundance of punch. It was a new spice punch he had originated, to be served later by pouring from a pitcher into tall glasses filled with ice shaved into snow. He served Gayle a glass now and she pronounced it delicious.

Gayle found Lola practicing her songs and paused long enough to squeeze Lola's arm in friendliness. Leaving her, Gayle had a flash of wonder about the thefts again and the whole embarrassing business about Lola. But there was no time for meditating now.

At 7:30, a full hour ahead of time, the first guests arrived.

Gayle greeted them, a middle-aged couple, chatted amiably and sent Adele Larraway with them to the scene of the first act, on the lawn. In a beautiful nook there under the oak trees the string orchestra was already waiting, and when the guests came the soft music began.

By 8 o'clock several more had arrived and by 8:15 literally hundreds of gay people were on the expansive lawn. They all came, as before, to the house first, presented their tickets and their courtesies, left hats and wraps in the assigned rooms, and then went to the greensward. Mrs. Holmquist, the detective-maid, gave careful attention to the ladies in their private wing of the mansion.

Adele Larraway and Lola Montesa, assisted by three boy friends of Bill, did most of the honors at the doorway, for the simple reason that Bill and Gayle had other duties. Mr. Weems helped some, beaming kindly. Mr. Merrifield, said he, needed to rest a while. The social amenities could be seen to more pleasantly after the play, anyway, because people were in something of a hurry to get seats now.

At 8:20 Bill asked Gayle about Jeremy. "I can't find him anywhere and we've got to get the cast assembled. We're due to start the play in 10 minutes."

Gayle nodded nervously. "I'll look," she said, and went hastily away.

She went onto the porches, circled hurriedly across the lawn to the dressing tent hidden in shrubbery back, to the first stage, then came to the house again. For a moment there she hesitated in indecision. Then she started down a hallway to take the stairs to the library, Jeremy's favorite retreat in weeks past.

For a moment she was alone in the hallway, but quite unexpectedly a door opened and Gayle saw Mrs. Holmquist come through, dressed for the street. Even more surprising was the fact that Tempe Hyde came with her.

"Oh! Are—are you going to leave now, Maudie?" Gayle asked. "And have either of you seen—"

"Yes," the older woman replied, in a tone no longer a maid's. But she smiled knowingly. "My work is done. I'm taking away your Miss Hyde!"

For a long, long moment Gayle just stared. Mrs. Holmquist nodded. Tempe—cute little Tempe, who had been so peppery, so full of life at times among the group here in the Merrifield mansion—did not meet Gayle's eyes. She merely looked off at nothing, her lips drawn tight and pale. Her spectacles, too, were missing now, and that made almost a miraculous change in her appearance. Gayle was appalled.

Gayle looked at the woman who had been her maid. "You—you mean—you mean she—"

Mrs. Holmquist nodded and spoke with almost motherly kindness, barely above a whisper. "Yes, dear. But we are leaving now, and you must go on. Go on with your party and your play. You must! Understand? Don't think of this now. Go right ahead and—and be happy tonight!"

Forcefully, then, she escorted Tempe out a side door to a car that was waiting in the west driveway. Gayle saw a man at the wheel of the car and another beside him.

She saw, too, as they got into the rear seat, that Mrs. Holmquist and Tempe Hyde were handcuffed together.

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

ANY PERSON not in excellent mental, emotional and physical health doubtless would have cracked up right there.

But lovely Gayle Dixon just sat down for a moment in one of the hall chairs and allowed matters to sink in. She stared off sort of vacantly for a little while, orienting her thoughts. And that extra something which calm, self-disciplined people have, came to her now; it quite offset the fact that she had been in a strain of details all morning and afternoon and faced a further strain for the night. It provided just the necessary reserve for her to "take" the fact that Tempe Hyde was the thief that The Oaks had shielded.

There was a great deal she could have done. Certainly there was much she wanted to say and do, immediately. She wanted to fly to Bill, to tell Lola. To tell dear old Graham, the butler. To go to police headquarters and get details from Mrs. Holmquist. And of course to tell Jeremy, who had been brought in on the regrettable affair.

But no! No, she mustn't, because she was seeking Jeremy even now for another purpose—to start the play. Approximately 1,700 people were in their seats on the lawn, chatting amiably—but waiting. Tempe Hyde's part would have to be glossed over some way—another managerial detail for her and Bill! No, she must simply alibi quickly for Tempe's absence and help Bill go on with the play. Explanations could come later, tomorrow, perhaps.

She had been looking hurriedly for Jeremy when the interruption came, so that now, after the briefest rest to throw off her confusion, Gayle resumed her way on upstairs.

She opened the library door, but it was dark. She went then to Jeremy's bedroom and tapped on the door. When it did not open, she turned the knob and called gently through a crack, but heard no response.

She stood there thinking a moment. She remembered then that Jeremy sometimes used his grandfather's study because there were books there, and the place was cozy and nice. She turned the knob of the study door. No light was on, but the small fireplace blaze threw dancing lights and shadows. Silhouetted before the fireplace she saw Jeremy, standing, head bowed.

"Jeremy!" she spoke, walking in. "We've been looking everywhere for you!"

He turned in surprise. He held out a hand, as if in supplication, and he answered her at once. "Gayle! Gayle—I—see here, I'm awfully glad you came!"

Something in his voice, some significant tone inflection, made her pause and look carefully at him.

"Gayle, I—see here, I've been doing an awful lot of thinking. Honestly I have. All evening, longer, I guess. Things have been—well, a great many things have happened to me and—see here, Gayle, will you marry me?"

Shocked again, she could not answer, or even move.

"Will you marry me, Gayle? Soon? I—see here—"

He paused to swallow, hard. And in the interval they heard another sound. From around the bookcase, where the comfortable old couch was, came unmistakable footsteps, suddenly and rather energetically. In a moment Mr. Merrifield appeared, and his old face was illumined not only by the fire, but by a definite inner excitement and stimulation.

"Jeremy!" he boomed when he approached. "I had no thought of evesdropping, but it all happened so fast—I was resting. Nevertheless, I am delighted. I congratulate you . . . congratulate you, and—"

He was holding out a hand to shake Jeremy's and in another moment he would surely have turned benignly to Gayle.

But Gayle turned quickly and in an instant was running out of the room.

The talk between grandfather and grandson was brief, but significant. Mr. Merrifield was almost boisterous for a moment.

His plan had worked! His plan to bring Jeremy Tucker out of the mental and social doldrums. It had worked better than he had dared hope, really. With his own ears he had chanced to hear Jeremy propose marriage to Gayle, and he felt that Gayle was as nearly perfect as a young woman could be. The eccentric old fellow simply never gave thought to Gayle's own possible reactions in the matter.

"Women are likely to be upset easily, son," he counseled now. "You sort of took her by surprise. That is all. Now go on out there in the hall—you'll find her in tears, likely as not. Women are emotional creatures, Jeremy. Be gentle with her, and kind. We men never understand 'em. But you just go on out there and put your arm around her and bring her back in here. I'll congratulate her, and then I'll get out and let you two have a talk alone!"

He ended in a chuckle, not even noticing the distress on Jeremy's face. Jeremy could say nothing, but he did move to follow his grandfather's instructions. Go bring Gayle back. That's right—that would be the thing to do. Go find Gayle. He had proposed marriage to Gayle and she had fled. He must go find her. The old man, still chuckling delightedly, had stooped over to turn on his desk lamp, so Jeremy started toward the door.

In the hallway he did not see Gayle as he expected. Nor was she in any of the other large rooms on this floor. He looked and he called her gently, moving slowly from place to place. Out the windows he heard the soft music from the orchestra entertaining the 1,700 people, but he gave little thought to that. He had no conception of time in this situation now. He couldn't have said whether the time was 6 o'clock or 8 o'clock, or 9. Actually it was 8:30—time for "The Wit to Woo" to begin—and most of the cast had assembled at the tent dressing room, ready to go on. But all the principals were missing.

Nearly 10 minutes had passed before Jeremy walked slowly downstairs and came onto Gayle again. She was near the side doorway and she was sobbing—and she was leaning on Bill Bailey's shoulder and being held tightly in Bill's arms. As if he were a man in a trance, Jeremy came up to them.

"All right, Tucker!" Bill began firmly. "You said or did something that made this girl cry, and you can't get away with that. I don't know exactly what the score is between us, but I'm telling you here and now that I'm in love with Gayle Dixon, and hereafter it's a man-to-man fight. You understand that? I mean what I said. You and your whole confounded fortune can't stop me, nor anything else if Gayle will give me a chance! I'm chucking this job. I don't want but one thing in life—a chance to win you, Gayle—and somewhere else I can get interesting work that isn't as hair-brained as this. If Tucker here has insulted you or—"

"Bill!" Gayle looked up.

"I mean it! I mean it's going to be man to man! I've held off, Gayle, because I don't like to play dirt on any man. I won't yet. But I'm serving notice. The only person who can stop me is you, Gayle, and you're going to have a hard time."

"Bill!" She had stopped sobbing, and she grabbed his big shoulders to shake him, her pretty face tear-touched and drawn in what surely was combined pleasure and pain. But he was not looking at her. He moved almost roughly now, a man with his mind made up, set on a definite goal.

"You said the old gent was upstairs," he resumed, speaking firmly and rather fast. "We're going to him. I'm resigning, here and now, and I'm telling him so. Then I—"

"Oh, I say—see here, Bill—!" Jeremy tried to interrupt.

"I'm not joking or anything of the sort." He was striding up the stairs now, Gayle and Jeremy near him and trying to talk to him both at once.

Their youthful voices made a veritable wrangling as they entered the study again. Mr. Merrifield looked up in some surprise.

"Come in, young friends, and—" But they scarcely heard him.

Gayle held to one arm, Jeremy tugged lightly, nervously, at Bill's other. Bill's face was flushed now.

"Play or no play, I'm done, I'm done," he kept declaring. "When I make up my mind to something—"

"SIR!" Old Mr. Merrifield could roar, when necessary. He roared now, and quite interrupted the others. A sudden silence reigned, and Gayle broke it.

"Make him behave, Mr. Merrifield! He doesn't understand a lot of things! I—I just hate him—I mean I love him! I love him, Mr. Merrifield! We have come to explain that we can't—oh . . . Mr. Merri-field!"

She quite lost her words in sobbing again, and again Bill Bailey held her very close to him and petted her and fondled her hair, glaring defiantly at the rich grandfather and grandson.

National Capital Is a Mecca for The Lovemakers

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Perhaps it's just the "silly season" which cynics jest about at this time of the year, but never in the memory of the oldest D. C. resident has there been so much open and unabashed lovemaking as in the national capital at the present time.

What's the cause of all this? Are the boys taking advantage of the situation in Europe and saying to their best girls, "Who knows, this time next year I may be dead on Flanders Field." Apparently this argument does the preliminary thawing out, for never has there been such open lovemaking in Washington, D. C. They've stepped up several paces since World War No. 1.

Though we may claim several generations of forebears, born and reared in the National Capital, heretofore we've seen little lovemaking on the streets, parks, and buses of Washington, D. C. Perhaps it was all the gentlemen in bronze coats and vests looking down reproachfully from marble pedestals, or it may have been the public buildings or the awe-inspiring Washington Monument. Be that as it may, Washington doesn't usually make love as frankly as Paris, London, or even New York.

One sees the bride and groom spending a twenty-four-hour honeymoon in the national capital, stealthily holding hands in the Congressional Library, wholly indifferent to the gorgeous frescoes which cost this country a-plenty.

Or if they're fortunate enough to have a letter from their congressman which admits them to the lower floor of the White House, we pen-pushers see them going through the marble halls, hand in hand, asking who those women are in the Green Room. Courteously, the usher explains the women back of the red silk rope are there to attend Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference. The more courageous of the newly-married crane over the red silk rope and take in the beautiful Aubusson carpet, the portraits, the crystal chandelier, the porcelain vases given by Japan to Commodore Perry. One may hear the groom whisper to the bride something like this: "All said and done, I think the Grand Hotel back home is a good deal snappier."

Buses Are Loaded

All the sightseeing buses seem to be loaded with lovers. If it's the twilight hour, her head reposes on his shoulder; if it's broaddaylight, they hold hands. Going through the public park — Lafayete . Dupont Circle, Franklin. Judiciary—a reticent person feels obliged to cough boisterously as the benches are approached where two-sing is going on.

Footnote to girls: The majority of people in this country do not approve of sending soldiers overseas! With the world aflame with mass madness, we need our soldiers here, and if you want to give Jim or George the opportunty of stealing a kiss under false pretenses, well and good. But I think it's a safe bet, Jim or George are not going to Europe.

We may send the Allies what we are pleased to call "superfluous munitions," but as for sending soldiers, we remember what happened last time when good old Uncle Sam, later known as "Uncle Shylock," got it in the neck. This time he strokes his beard and says, "Never again."

Women are emotional creatures, Jeremy. Be gentle with her, and kind. We men never understand 'em. But you just go on out there and put your arm around her and bring her back in here. I'll congratulate her, and then I'll get out and let you two have a talk alone!"

He ended in a chuckle, not even noticing the distress on Jeremy's face. Jeremy could say nothing, but he did move to follow his grandfather's instructions. Go bring Gayle back. That's right—that would be the thing to do. Go find Gayle. He had proposed marriage to Gayle and she had fled. He must go find her. The old man, still chuckling delightedly, had stooped over to turn on his desk lamp, so Jeremy started toward the door.

In the hallway he did not see Gayle as he expected. Nor was she in any of the other large rooms on this floor. He looked and he called her gently, moving slowly from place to place. Out the windows he heard the soft music from the orchestra entertaining the 1,700 people, but he gave little thought to that. He had no conception of time in this situation now. He couldn't have said whether the time was 6 o'clock or 8 o'clock, or 9. Actually it was 8:30—time for "The Wit to Woo" to begin—and most of the cast had assembled at the tent dressing room, ready to go on. But all the principals were missing.

Nearly 10 minutes had passed before Jeremy walked slowly downstairs and came onto Gayle again. She was near the side doorway and she was sobbing—and she was leaning on Bill Bailey's shoulder and being held tightly in Bill's arms. As if he were a man in a trance, Jeremy came up to them.

"All right, Tucker!" Bill began firmly. "You said or did something that made this girl cry, and you can't get away with that. I don't know exactly what the score is between us, but I'm telling you here and now that I'm in love with Gayle Dixon, and hereafter it's a man-to-man fight. You understand that? I mean what I said. You and your whole confounded fortune can't stop me, nor anything else if Gayle will give me a chance! I'm chucking this job. I don't want but one thing in life—a chance to win you, Gayle—and somewhere else I can get interesting work that isn't as hair-brained as this. If Tucker here has insulted you or—"

"Bill!" Gayle looked up.

"I mean it! I mean it's going to be man to man! I've held off, Gayle, because I don't like to play dirt on any man. I won't yet. But I'm serving notice. The only person who can stop me is you, Gayle, and you're going to have a hard time."

"Bill!" She had stopped sobbing, and she grabbed his big shoulders to shake him, her pretty face tear-touched and drawn in what surely was combined pleasure and pain. But he was not looking at her. He moved almost roughly now, a man with his mind made up, set on a definite goal.

"You said the old gent was upstairs," he resumed, speaking firmly and rather fast. "We're going to him. I'm resigning, here and now, and I'm telling him so. Then I—"

"Oh, I say—see here, Bill—!" Jeremy tried to interrupt.

"I'm not joking or anything of the sort." He was striding up the stairs now, Gayle and Jeremy near him and trying to talk to him both at once.

Their youthful voices made a veritable wrangling as they entered the study again. Mr. Merrifield looked up in some surprise.

"Come in, young friends, and—" But they scarcely heard him.

Gayle held to one arm, Jeremy tugged lightly, nervously, at Bill's other. Bill's face was flushed now.

"Play or no play, I'm done, I'm done," he kept declaring. "When I make up my mind to something—"

"SIR!" Old Mr. Merrifield could roar, when necessary. He roared now, and quite interrupted the others. A sudden silence reigned, and Gayle broke it.

"Make him behave, Mr. Merrifield! He doesn't understand a lot of things! I—I just hate him—I mean I love him! I love him, Mr. Merrifield! We have come to explain that we can't—oh . . . Mr. Merri-field!"

She quite lost her words in sobbing again, and again Bill Bailey held her very close to him and petted her and fondled her hair, glaring defiantly at the rich grandfather and grandson.

National Capital Is a Mecca for The Lovemakers

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Perhaps it's just the "silly season" which cynics jest about at this time of the year, but never in the memory of the oldest D. C. resident has there been so much open and unabashed lovemaking as in the national capital at the present time.

What's the cause of all this? Are the boys taking advantage of the situation in Europe and saying to their best girls, "Who knows, this time next year I may be dead on Flanders Field." Apparently this argument does the preliminary thawing out, for never has there been such open lovemaking in Washington, D. C. They've stepped up several paces since World War No. 1.

Though we may claim several generations of forebears, born and reared in the National Capital, heretofore we've seen little lovemaking on the streets, parks, and buses of Washington, D. C. Perhaps it was all the gentlemen in bronze coats and vests looking down reproachfully from marble pedestals, or it may have been the public buildings or the awe-inspiring Washington Monument. Be that as it may, Washington doesn't usually make love as frankly as Paris, London, or even New York.

One sees the bride and groom spending a twenty-four-hour honeymoon in the national capital, stealthily holding hands in the Congressional Library, wholly indifferent to the gorgeous frescoes which cost this country a-plenty.

Or if they're fortunate enough to have a letter from their congressman which admits them to the lower floor of the White House, we pen-pushers see them going through the marble halls, hand in hand, asking who those women are in the Green Room. Courteously, the usher explains the women back of the red silk rope are there to attend Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference. The more courageous of the newly-married crane over the red silk rope and take in the beautiful Aubusson carpet, the portraits, the crystal chandelier, the porcelain vases given by Japan to Commodore Perry. One may hear the groom whisper to the bride something like this: "All said and done, I think the Grand Hotel back home is a good deal snappier."

Buses Are Loaded

All the sightseeing buses seem to be loaded with lovers. If it's the twilight hour, her head reposes on his shoulder; if it's broaddaylight, they hold hands. Going through the public park — Lafayete . Dupont Circle, Franklin, Judiciary—a reticent person feels obliged to cough boisterously as the benches are approached where two-sing is going on.

Footnote to girls: The majority of people in this country do not approve of sending soldiers overseas! With the world aflame with mass madness, we need our soldiers here, and if you want to give Jim or George the opportunity of stealing a kiss under false pretenses, well and good. But I think it's a safe bet, Jim or George are not going to Europe.

We may send the Allies what we are pleased to call "superfluous munitions," but as for sending soldiers, we remember what happened last time when good old Uncle Sam, later known as "Uncle Shylock," got it in the neck. This time he strokes his beard and says, "Never again."

Stocks Drop One to Four Points On Unfavorable European News

Churchill's War Statement Has Depressing Effect on Market

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—Leading stocks sank two to four points today in a moderate sell-off induced by Prime Minister Churchill's statement that the French had agreed to yield their navy to Germany.

The pessimism among traders was moderated by the report that a French fleet was anchored in Alexandria harbor, which is under British control.

The Associated Press average of sixty selected stocks dropped .8 of a point at 40.8. Transfers totaled 694,270 shares compared with 471,990 yesterday.

Among the shares on the downgrade were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Caterpillar, American Telephone, North American, American Water Works, International Nickel, Westinghouse, duPont, Allied Chemical, U. S. Gypsum, Chesapeake & Ohio, New York Central, Standard Oil of N. J., and Loft.

Curb transactions — of 143,000 shares compared with 130,000 yesterday—followed those of the big board, losers of one or more points included Aluminum of America, Gulf Oil, American Cyanamid "B", Bell Aircraft and New Jersey Zinc.

Dix and Patrick Are Co-Starred in Picture

Richard Dix and Gail Patrick, dramatic actress, combine their talents for the second time in RKO Radio's new offering, "Reno," in which they are co-starred as man and wife, today at the New Liberty Theater.

"Reno," presents their marriage as a turbulent, rocky romance, with each possessing a clashing temperament despite their real love for each another.

Dix is cast as a confident, aggressive attorney who marries and settles down in Reno in 1905, when the city was nothing but a mining town. Miss Patrick, as his wife, is devoted to him, but disagrees with his desire to make his "pile" early and retire later, she preferring to take time out for travel and social contacts.

"Reno" features in prominent roles Anita Louise, Paul Cavanaugh and Laura Hope Crews.

Anne Nagel forsakes her romantic roles to portray a menacing "flirt" in the film. Peggy Moran, blue-eyed screen beauty, is seen as the young girl who captures the attention of Arlen from her rival. Other favorites in the cast include Donald Briggs, Joe Besser, Robert Emmet O'Connor, Wade Beteler and William Wayne.

Action of the story takes place in and around a giant steel mill.

Story of Family Is Offered at Garden

"Three Cheers for the Irish," which will open today at the Garden, is a family story.

It concerns a retired New York cop, Thomas Mitchell's role, and his three beautiful daughters, played by Priscilla Lane, Virginia Grey and Irene Harvey.

They decide that Pop is to run for office of alderman. The campaign progresses smoothly, aided by Alan Hale and William Lundigan, until Irene accepts campaign funds from a racketeer. Priscilla elopes with Denis Morgan, a young rookie cop, disliked by Casey. Then Casey discovers the source of his campaign money, and his public admission of this dumbfounds the people into electing him.

The co-feature on the bill is "Honeymoon Deferred."

King Solomon's Mines Coming to Embassy

Thousands of giant Zulus, armed with flame-tipped spears, battling to the death, with the lives of five European adventurers, four men and a woman, and the wealth of the fabulous mines of Ophir at stake, furnish the big scene in "King Solomon's Mines," the Gaumont version of the Rider Haggard romance, which will open today at the Embassy theater with a distinguished cast headed by Sir Cederic Hardwicke, Paul Robeson, Anna Lee, Roland Young and John Loder.

To achieve authenticity in the African sequences, a location crew, headed by Geoffrey Barkas traveled 3,000 miles into the heart of Zululand, filming action and background shots in the Kalahari Desert, in the Drakensberg Mountains and the Valley of a Thousand Hills—the actual locale which Sir Rider Haggard gave to his novel. More than 5,000 native warriors (Impingi) were employed for the battle sequences.

Radio communications was established between the location units and the home studio, and photographs sent by air to enable the home production units to build sets and makg costumes that would parallel the location sequences.

The second feature is William Bakewell in "Mile A Minute Love." In addition to the two features another chapter of the serial "Drums of Fu Manchu" will be shown.

WITH TUCKER BAND

Amy Arneil, the "Suwanee Sweetheart," outstanding vocalist with Tommy Tucker and his band who play a return engagement at the Strand theater Thursday.

"Forty Little Mothers" Closes Run Today

Closing today at the Maryland theater will be Metro Goldwyn Mayer's comedy hit "Forty Little Mothers" starring Eddie Cantor. In the supporting cast are Judith Anderson, Rita Johnson, Bonita Granville and many other stars.

Wallace Beery, who in his last four pictures has displayed his versatility as, variously, a racetrack veterinarian, pioneer Maryland stage line manager, New York policeman and New England tugboat captain, turns to the ragged regimentals of an escaped Yankee prisoner of war in his newest starring venture, "The Man from Dakota." The film opens tomorrow at the Maryland theater, with Dolores Del Rio and John Howard teamed with Beery in the leading roles.

Picturization of MacKinlay Kantor's Civil War novel, "Arouse and Beware," the new drama presents Beery as Sergeant Barstow who is much more interested in keeping his stomach filled and heading West than in rejoining his regiment. Howard plays his idealistic young superior officer, Lieut. Clark, and Miss Del Rio makes an impressive return to films as the Russian girl, Jenny, caught in the toils of the struggle between North and South.

STARS IN "THE MAN FROM DAKOTA"

Strand Lists Variety Of Entertainment

Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard, will appear for the last times today at the Strand in the mystery farce, "The Ghost Breakers". Bob Hope is a network and screen comedian, and Paulette Goddard sets his heart a-dancing with some un-ghost-like romancing.

Tomorrow in answer to a local demand, Tommy Tucker and his orchestra returns, appearing at 2, 7 and 9:15 p. m. Tucker will present a new program including Amy Arnell, the Swanee Sweetheart," Donald Brown, romantic baritone; Kerwin Somerville, novelty singer, and the Voices Three. On the screen will be Lynn Bari and Donald Woods in the Twentieth Century Fox picture, "City of Chance."

Friday, Ozzie Nelson and his orchestra will be on the stage with Rosanne Stevens taking care of the vocal end. An added feature will be Barton and Stone, dance stylists. Maestro Nelson comes to Cumberland direct from three weeks in Boston.

Saturday, Ceasar Romero, Mary Beth Hughes Evelyn Venable and Chris Pin Martin will be seen in the O'Henry story "Lucky Cisco Kid", a western picture. On the stage will be "Broadway on Parade" a vaudeville revue, featuring six acts.

With these four performances Saturday, the Strand will close for an extensive remodeling program.

Woman Is Wounded

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 25, (AP)—Mrs. Omay McClary, 35, midway in the task of moving from her cottage home today, was shot three times and critically wounded.

City Detective Roy B. Hagley announced the arrest for questioning of Thomas Dundas Meyer, 59, former member of the police force. Detective W. R. Byrd quoted Mrs. McClary that she was moving from the cottage and that Meyer, the owner, "didn't want me to move."

Witness told Hagley, he said, that Mrs. McClary ran from Meyer's home toward her own cottage and Meyer fired as he gave chase.

Stocks Drop One to Four Points On Unfavorable European News

Churchill's War Statement Has Depressing Effect on Market

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—Leading stocks sank two to four points today in a moderate sell-off induced by Prime Minister Churchill's statement that the French had agreed to yield their navy to Germany.

The pessimism among traders was moderated by the report that a French fleet was anchored in Alexandria harbor, which is under British control.

The Associated Press average of sixty selected stocks dropped .8 of a point at 40.8. Transfers totaled 694,270 shares compared with 471,990 yesterday.

Among the shares on the downgrade were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Caterpillar, American Telephone, North American, American Water Works, International Nickel, Westinghouse, duPont, Allied Chemical, U. S. Gypsum, Chesapeake & Ohio, New York Central, Standard Oil of N. J., and Loft.

Curb transactions — of 143,000 shares compared with 130,000 yesterday—followed those of the big board, losers of one or more points included Aluminum of America, Gulf Oil, American Cyanamid "B", Bell Aircraft and New Jersey Zinc.

Dix and Patrick Are Co-Starred in Picture

Richard Dix and Gail Patrick, dramatic actress, combine their talents for the second time in RKO Radio's new offering, "Reno," in which they are co-starred as man and wife, today at the New Liberty Theater.

"Reno," presents their marriage as a turbulent, rocky romance, with each possessing a clashing temperament despite their real love for each another.

Dix is cast as a confident, aggressive attorney who marries and settles down in Reno in 1905, when the city was nothing but a mining town. Miss Patrick as his wife, is devoted to him, but disagrees with his desire to make his "pile" early and retire later, she preferring to take time out for travel and social contacts.

"Reno" features in prominent roles Anita Louise, Paul Cavanaugh and Laura Hope Crews.

Anne Nagel forsakes her romantic roles to portray a menacing "flirt" in the film. Peggy Moran, blue-eyed screen beauty, is seen as the young girl who captures the attention of Arlen from her rival. Other favorites in the cast include Donald Briggs, Joe Besser, Robert Emmet O'Connor, Wade Beteler and William Wayne.

Action of the story takes place in and around a giant steel mill.

Story of Family Is Offered at Garden

"Three Cheers for the Irish," which will open today at the Garden, is a family story.

It concerns a retired New York cop, Thomas Mitchell's role, and his three beautiful daughters, played by Priscilla Lane, Virginia Grey and Irene Harvey.

They decide that Pop is to run for office of alderman. The campaign progresses smoothly, aided by Alan Hale and William Lundigan, until Irene accepts campaign funds from a racketeer. Priscilla elopes with Denis Morgan, a young rookie cop, disliked by Casey. Then Casey discovers the source of his campaign money, and his public admission of this dumbfounds the people into electing him.

King Solomon's Mines Coming to Embassy

Thousands of giant Zulus, armed with flame-tipped spears, battling to the death, with the lives of five European adventurers, four men and a woman, and the wealth of the fabulous mines of Ophir at stake, furnish the big scene in "King Solomon's Mines," the Gaumont version of the Rider Haggard romance, which will open today at the Embassy theater with a distinguished cast headed by Sir Cederic Hardwicke, Paul Robeson, Anna Lee, Roland Young and John Loder.

To achieve authenticity in the African sequences, a location crew, headed by Geoffrey Barkas traveled 3,000 miles into the heart of Zululand, filming action and background shots in the Kalahari Desert, in the Drakensberg Mountains and the Valley of a Thousand Hills—the actual locale which Sir Rider Haggard gave to his novel. More than 5,000 native warriors (Impingi) were employed for the battle sequences.

Radio communications was established between the location units and the home studio, and photographs sent by air to enable the home production units to build sets and make costumes that would parallel the location sequences.

The second feature is William Bakewell in "Mile A Minute Love." In addition to the two features another chapter of the serial "Drums of Fu Manchu" will be shown.

"Forty Little Mothers" Closes Run Today

Closing today at the Maryland theater will be Metro Goldwyn Mayer's comedy hit "Forty Little Mothers" starring Eddie Cantor. In the supporting cast are Judith Anderson, Rita Johnson, Bonita Granville and many other stars.

Wallace Beery, who in his last four pictures has displayed his versatility as, variously, a racetrack veterinarian, pioneer Maryland stage line manager, New York policeman and New England tugboat captain, turns to the ragged regimentals of an escaped Yankee prisoner of war in his newest starring venture, "The Man from Dakota." The film opens tomorrow at the Maryland theater, with Dolores Del Rio and John Howard teamed with Beery in the leading roles.

Picturization of MacKinlay Kantor's Civil War novel, "Arouse and Beware," the new drama presents Beery as Sergeant Barstow who is much more interested in keeping his stomach filled and heading West than in rejoining his regiment. Howard plays his idealistic young superior officer, Lieut. Clark, and Miss Del Rio makes an impressive return to films as the Russian girl, Jenny, caught in the toils of the struggle between North and South.

STARS IN "THE MAN FROM DAKOTA"

Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard in "The Man from Dakota," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture opening tomorrow at the Maryland theater for a four day showing.

Woman Is Wounded

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 25, (AP)—Mrs. Omay McClary, 35, midway in the task of moving from her cottage home today, was shot three times and critically wounded.

City Detective Roy B. Hagley announced the arrest for questioning of Thomas Dundas Meyer, 59, former member of the police force. Detective W. R. Byrd quoted Mrs. McClary that she was moving from the cottage and that Meyer, the owner, "didn't want me to move."

Witness told Hagley, he said, that Mrs. McClary ran from Meyer's home toward her own cottage and Meyer fired as he gave chase.

Physician Says Vertigo Yields To Food Regime

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Is there any diet for vertigo?

A great many middle-aged people who have progressive deafness are bothered more with the vertigo than they are with the deafness in the organ of equilibrium, the semi-circular canals, which are connected with the middle ear.

A diet known as the Furstenberg diet is based on the theory that the retention of sodium ions in the tissues of the inner ear is the cause of attacks of vertigo or Meniere's disease. The diet eliminates foods high in sodium.

The diet is as follows:

Group A—The following foods may be taken daily: Eggs, meat, fish and fowl as directed, bread as desired; cereal, one of the following—farina, oatmeal, rice, puffed rice or puffed wheat; potato and one or more servings of any of the following—(a) macaroni, (b) spaghetti, (c) rice, (d) corn, (e) cranberries, (f) prunes, (g) plums, milk as desired; vegetables and fruit daily of any fruit and of any vegetable not included in groups B and C, as desired.

Group B—Foods to be avoided: All salt meats and fish, or bread, crackers and butter prepared with salt; carrots, clams, condensed milk, raisins, caviar, cowpeas, olives, spinach, cheese, endive, oysters.

Only Twice Weekly

Group C—Foods to be taken no more than twice weekly: Lima beans, beets, buttermilk, cantaloup, cauliflower, celery, chard, dried coconut, dried currants, dates, figs, horseradish, kohlrabi, limes, muskmelons, peanuts, peaches, mustard, pumpkin, radishes, rutabagas, strawberries, turnips, turnip tops, watercress.

Note: All foods to be prepared and served without salt.

What are the common causes of poisoning in the United States?

In children the commonest cause of poisoning is strychnine poisoning. Children get this in candy-coated or chocolate-coated cathartic pills containing stryhnine along with aloes and belladonna.

Among adults the commonest cause for poisoning in the United States today is by the use of the barbituates—hypnotics used for sleeplessness.

Unlike Former Years

This is a new development entirely different from the incidence in former years of causes of poisoning. Accidental poisoning with the barbituates is rare although somebody sometimes takes an overdose for sleeping purposes. It is estimated that 1,200,000,000 grams of barbituates are taken in the United States per year.

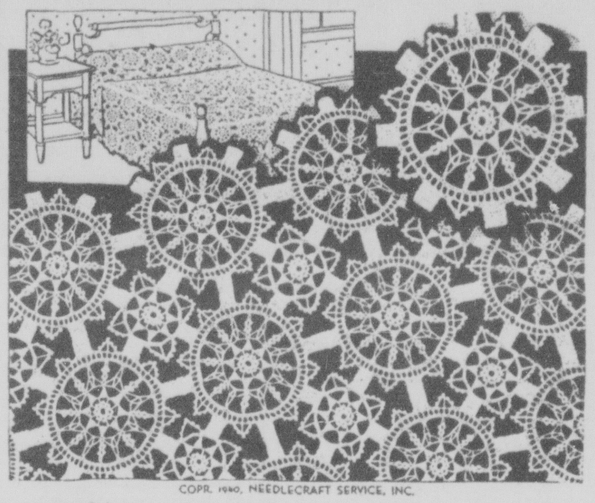

The number of suicide deaths due to barbituates in 1937 was over 400.

Questions and Answers

R. A. F.—"Please answer in your column if anything can be done for a baby with large protruding ears."

Answer—Certainly, but best let time pass and see whether the ears are protruding ten or fifteen years from now. Babies change very much. Blue-eyed ones turn into brown-eyed ones, the size of the head, the size of the ears become relatively different. If at the age of 10 or 15 the child seems to have ears so prominent they constitute a deformity, one of the simplest operations done by the plastic surgeon is to make them lie flat on the head.

Physician Says Vertigo Yields To Food Regime

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Is there any diet for vertigo?

A great many middle-aged people who have progressive deafness are bothered more with the vertigo than they are with the deafness in the organ of equilibrium, the semi-circular canals, which are connected with the middle ear.

A diet known as the Furstenberg diet is based on the theory that the retention of sodium ions in the tissues of the inner ear is the cause of attacks of vertigo or Meniere's disease. The diet eliminates foods high in sodium.

The diet is as follows:

Group A—The following foods may be taken daily: Eggs, meat, fish and fowl as directed, bread as desired; cereal, one of the following—farina, oatmeal, rice, puffed rice or puffed wheat; potato and one or more servings of any of the following—(a) macaroni, (b) spaghetti, (c) rice, (d) corn, (e) cranberries, (f) prunes, (g) plums, milk as desired; vegetables and fruit daily of any fruit and of any vegetable not included in groups B and C, as desired.

Group B—Foods to be avoided: All salt meats and fish, or bread, crackers and butter prepared with salt; carrots, clams, condensed milk, raisins, caviar, cowpeas, olives, spinach, cheese, endive, oysters.

Only Twice Weekly

Group C—Foods to be taken no more than twice weekly: Lima beans, beets, buttermilk, cantaloup, cauliflower, celery, chard, dried coconut, dried currants, dates, figs, horseradish, kohlrabi, limes, muskmelons, peanuts, peaches, mustard, pumpkin, radishes, rutabagas, strawberries, turnips, turnip tops, watercress.

Note: All foods to be prepared and served without salt.

What are the common causes of poisoning in the United States?

In children the commonest cause of poisoning is strychnine poisoning. Children get this in candy-coated or chocolate-coated cathartic pills containing stryhnine along with aloes and belladonna.

Among adults the commonest cause for poisoning in the United States today is by the use of the barbituates—hypnotics used for sleeplessness.

Unlike Former Years

This is a new development entirely different from the incidence in former years of causes of poisoning. Accidental poisoning with the barbituates is rare although somebody sometimes takes an overdose for sleeping purposes. It is estimated that 1,200,000,000 grams of barbituates are taken in the United States per year.

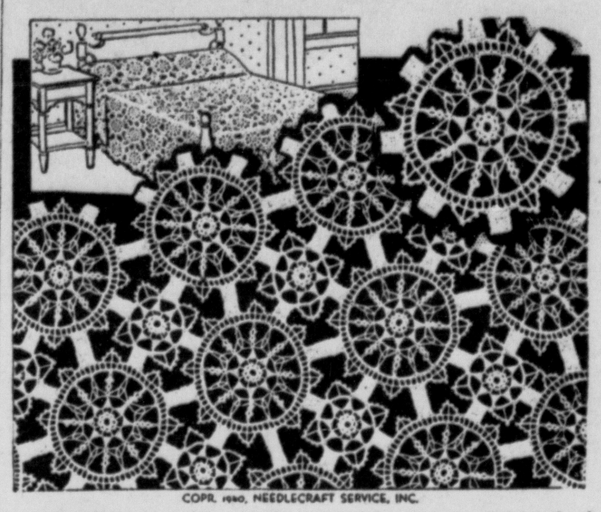

The number of suicide deaths due to barbituates in 1937 was over 400.

Questions and Answers

R. A. F.—"Please answer in your column if anything can be done for a baby with large protruding ears."

Answer—Certainly, but best let time pass and see whether the ears are protruding ten or fifteen years from now. Babies change very much. Blue-eyed ones turn into brown-eyed ones, the size of the head, the size of the ears become relatively different. If at the age of 10 or 15 the child seems to have ears so prominent they constitute a deformity, one of the simplest operations done by the plastic surgeon is to make them lie flat on the head.

You Have To Use Your Head To Have a Lovely Throat

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

We're putting a higher value on lovely throats again these days. So, if we're going to stick our necks out, we've got to go in for some special exercises. Exercise, by improving circulation, helps improve the skin and we want to keep the skin of our necks as firm as the skin on our faces.

Dabbing ice on your throat the way Rosemary Lane, of the movies, does here,. is a. good finish for a massage.

Here's a good prelude to exercising: Tilt your head back, place your fingers at the point of the chin, and massage lubricating cream into your neck with downward strokes. After that briskly rub ice over the chin.

Here's a simple exercise, but an effective one: Just pull you neck in, then stick your chin out. Repeat that several times each morning.

For another, bend your head and neck to the left, then to the right. Throw your head back and do some imaginary chewing, opening the mouth and pulling the chin high with each chew.

Rotate your head in a wide circle without raising your shoulders or bending your back.

Place your fingers on the outside points of your shoulders and rotate the shoulders. Start with the shoulders high, then pull them backward, down, forward and up. During the whole exercise keep your head as far back as possible.

maintained silence about reports that warships of the United States fleet, which left Hawaii last night in the direction of the west coast, were bound for the Panama canal and the Atlantic.

Mr. Roosevelt, asked whether he thought it was advisable to pass legislation authorizing a draft of manpower, said there was nothing he could say about that except that the whole program was in the study stage.

The chief executive was questioned also as to whether he thought it would be desirable to repeal a 1917 statute interpreted by Attorney General Robert Jackson as forbidding sale to the British of twenty high-speed "mosquito" boats ordered originally by the navy.

He said it was a matter of opinion.

But, he added, it looked to him as if the boat deal would have been a good horse trade from the point of view of defense Instead of getting small boats with inadequate torpedoes Mr. Roosevelt continued, the navy would have delayed delivery on craft for itself and would have obtained much better boats with standard torpedoes.

The chief executive called off negotiations looking toward sale of the boats yesterday after receiving Jackson's opinion.

Has Health Program

Mr. Roosevelt also announced that government agencies were making a broad survey to guard health and insure educational facilities in the event that the defense program resulted in large movements of people into areas where plants were established or expanded.

The navy disclosed meantime, that the present American naval squadron of three vessels in European waters would be relieved shortly by three other vessels.

The war department instructed nine corps area commanders to canvass young reserve lieutenants with a view to selecting 9,000, exclusive of air corps men, for voluntary extended active duty with the regular army, reserve officers training corps, organized reserve and other units.

Those selected for troop duty will help to train the army.

You'll Get It In The Neck

By HELEN FOLLETT

EVEN THE BEST looking neck cannot be depended upon. Endure any physical or emotional upset for a protracted period and the neck is likely to go completely back on you. What was once a nice smooth surface has taken on a crepe-like pattern. Possible necklace lines have formed. Or fiddle strings are on the way. This calamity seldom comes before the fortieth birthday. A sweet little birthday present if you ask us, or if you don't.

Maybe the neck is jealous of the good care received by the facial coating. Much creaming and soothing massage goes on. If the neck gets one passing whisk of the fragrant emollient, it is lucky. May we suggest to the older girls of this beauty class that they feed their necks as they feed their faces? The practice may save future beauty worries.

"Stroke from the collar bones up to the chin tip."

Spank That Chest

Stroke from the collar bones up to the chin tip, one hand following the other. Place the thumbs on the jawline, just under the chin, smooth outward to the ear lobes. Give the chest and neck a good spanking with flattened fingers. Get the flesh steaming hot, then slap on a towel that has been wrung out of ice cold water. There will be a quick reaction of the blood streams that will firm tissues, tone muscles, make the skin surface of good coloring.

If you want to be chestier or bustier, chin the floor. Don't believe you can do that? It's as easy as rolling off a log. That is, if you have strong muscles. If you haven't you may do a flop but what of it? You're working in the cause of beauty, must be a good soldier.

Lie face downward on the floor, the feet placed under a heavy piece of furniture, hands flat on the floor beside your angel face. Lift the upper portion of the body as high as you can. Come down slowly, touch the chin to the floor. It is the slow downward movement that does the business.

Mason County Farmer Paroled

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va., June 25 (AP) — Sam McCausland, Mason county landowner who went to prison for slaying his farm tenant, is free after serving less than five years of an eighteen-year term.

The governor's office at Charleston confirmed today that McCausland, son of Confederate General John J. McCausland, had been released on parole.

He was sentenced October 24, 1935, for the fatal wounding of Howard Chester West, World war veteran who lived on the farm.

The trial was held at Spencer, on a change of venue. The testimony was that McCausland and West started home from Point Pleasant the afternoon of May 20, 1935.

It was charged that McCausland, in a quarrel, shot West with an old rifle which once was carried by General McCausland, noted in history for his Civil War raid on Chambersburg, Pa.

McCausland told the jury that, as he stepped from the car to search for a sheep-killing dog, West struck him with a wrench. He said he fired in self-defense.

The Roane county jury returned a verdict of second degree murder.

Mason County Farmer Paroled

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va., June 25 (AP) — Sam McCausland, Mason county landowner who went to prison for slaying his farm tenant, is free after serving less than five years of an eighteen-year term.

The governor's office at Charleston confirmed today that McCausland, son of Confederate General John J. McCausland, had been released on parole.

He was sentenced October 24, 1935, for the fatal wounding of Howard Chester West, World war veteran who lived on the farm.

The trial was held at Spencer, on a change of venue. The testimony was that McCausland and West started home from Point Pleasant the afternoon of May 20, 1935.

It was charged that McCausland, in a quarrel, shot West with an old rifle which once was carried by General McCausland, noted in history for his Civil War raid on Chambersburg, Pa.

McCausland told the jury that, as he stepped from the car to search for a sheep-killing dog, West struck him with a wrench. He said he fired in self-defense.

The Roane county jury returned a verdict of second degree murder.

striking the bomber. It turned to flee, but was trailed closely by the first British plane, and then a second, firing as they pursued.

A Scotch air raid warden said he saw one German plane plummet to the ground after it was attacked by two pursuit planes.

Over northeastern England another dogfight was watched from the ground.

British planes swarmed about a bomber which appeared after heavy explosions, then the barking of anti-aircraft guns were heard in the distance.

Many of the raiders were driven back to sea after meeting a hail of fire from batteries on the ground and fighter planes in the air.

"Bombs were dropped in several districts of southeastern Scotland," said Scottish regional commissioner Tom Johnson. "Fighters went up and anti-aircraft guns went into action. Three enemy planes were brought down."

The all-important question of what is to become of the French fleet, second largest in Europe, was answered by the official armistice stipulations, made public simultaneously, and by French Premier-Marshal Petain himself.

Prime Minister Churchill, accusing Petain of violating "solemn assurances" in handing over the fleet, earlier in the day had declared that Britain's safety "will be powerfully though not decisively affected by what happens to the French navy." He held out a faint hope that England still might salvage something of the French fleet through the empire outposts.

Just how much of the French sea and air power the Germans and Italians actually could get their hands on remained unanswered.

Some Units With British Fleet

Units of the French navy still were with the British fleet at Alexandria, Egypt, yesterday (Tuesday) and swarms of French planes winged their way southward over the Mediterranean during the armistice negotiations, ostensibly to carry on the fight from outposts there.

Germany promised solemnly however, under her armistice not to use French warships against Britain.

The official German armistice terms, following closely those made public in London Sunday, provide for complete French capitulation.

Under her separate armistice, reached Monday and paving the way for cessation of hostilities at 1:35 a. m. yesterday, Italy gets in addition:

1. "Full rights" over Jibuti, French Somaliland port and only rail outlet to Italian-conquered Ethiopia.
2. Demilitarized zones from thirty to one hundred and twenty miles wide in France, Tunis, Algeria and French Somaliland.
3. Italian troops will "stand on their advanced lines in all theaters of operations." This apparently means Italy will get little of France proper but will realize most, if not all, of her colonial claims.

Petain Explains Defeat

Petain, in a broadcast to his sorrowing people, told them the German invaders were "overwhelmingly superior" in every department, giving the government no other alternative but surrender.

For instance, in the second battle of the Aisne-Somme he said sixty French divisions, without fortifications, faced 150 German divisions with mechanized units. In other words 900,000 Frenchmen were matched against 2,250,000 better equipped Germans.

"The enemy crossed the Loire and then the remainder of France was defenseless," the aged Petain told his countrymen, observing their first day of dictated peace in mourning.

Germany meanwhile gave France to understand that any talk of final peace, supplementing the armistice already in force, would have to await a final German settlement of scores with Britain.

President Roosevelt, spurred into new action by the European events, announced a program of voluntary training for men nineteen to twenty-six years old who ultimately would receive commissions as officers in the naval reserve.

Five thousand men will be trained annually under the president's program, to be started in mid-July.

The statement that France must wait until Germany has completed her unfinished business with England was made by the well-informed Nazi commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland. It made remote any possibility of an early European peace conference.

Adolf Hitler set up a commission under General Heinrich Von Stuelpnagel to carry out the armistic terms while he preened his war machine for the battle of England.

Exultant Germans mingled their manifestations of jubilation over the French conquest with throaty renditions of the ancient German marching song—"we are sailing against England."

For Britain, steeling herself for the German onslaughts to come, it was a day of publicly expressed regrets.

Charging that the Petain government ordered the French navy handed over to Hitler in violation of "many solemn assurances," Churchill indicated Britain still might, somehow, take over the sea power of her defeated ally.

Churchill also hinted strongly that Britain expected to get valuable aid from units of the French empire refusing to recognize the surrender.

Fire Nazi Plane Factory

The British air force repaid a series of German night air rades with bombardments which the air ministry said fired a Nazi airplane factory at assel and smashed at other bases in western Germany and Nazi-occupied Netherlands.

In their attacks, the Germans said they rained bombs on British airports, airplane and industrial plants.

The axis powers were believed preparing to strike simultaneosly; Italy against objectives in the Mediterannean and East Africa and Germany directly against the British Isles.

Across the Mediterranean, Turkey and Iraq sought to form a common front against possible warfare in neighboring, French - mandated Syria where French forces were reported determined to fight on despite the mother country's surrender.

On the other side of the world Japan kept a close military and naval watch on French Indo-China. The Japanese said it was for the purpose of choking off China's supply route but there were predictions Tokyo might soon establish a protectorate over that French possession as well as the Dutch East Indies.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

GET THAT RE-ENTRY OUT

IF YOU were on the defensive and saw in dummy an ace which could be used as a re-entry for an almost established suit, wouldn't you like to knock it out at once if you could? Wouldn't you hope that thereby you could kill the entire long cards of the suit, thereby depriving declarer of all those tricks? Then why not use the same tactics if you are declarer? When one of your opponents has a suit that threatens your No Trump game, your best move is often to knock out as early as possible the only card of entry he could possibly have in another suit.

In an eleven-table tournament, there were three at which West bid his suit and against the No Trump game led his club 7. Let's follow the play at all three of these tables. In one case the declarer won the lead with the club K, went to dummy with the spade Q, tried hearts, losing the J finesse to the K, played dummy's club J on the return, losing to the Q, then took the third club with the A. He then ran his four spades and two hearts, but when he led a diamond to the A, East set him with club tricks.

At the second table, South and East win the first club and the second, then entered dummy with a spade and lost the heart finesse. West, having no more clubs, led his diamond single to East. A club return found the suit still stopped, so declarer made an overtrick.

At the third table, declarer won the first club and promptly led a diamond to the A. He won the club return, cashed three diamonds, four spades, lost a heart to West, then got two more heart tricks on the return, making two odd tricks because he read the lead hitting East's suit, and so knocked out the only entry East could possibly have.

Trotsky's Guard Found Murdered

MEXICO CITY, June 25 (AP) — The body of Sheldon Harte, secretary-guard who disappeared May 24 with the band which tried to assassinate Russian exile Leon Trotsky today was found in a shallow grave—the victim, said Trotsky's associates, of Soviet secret agents.

Trotsky said Harte's body "proves the falsity" of assertions that Harte had been an accomplice of the gang which raided his home with machineguns and incendiary bombs.

One of Trotsky's household declared Harte was "shot in the back of the head, the method of the ogpu."

striking the bomber. It turned to flee, but was trailed closely by the first British plane, and then a second, firing as they pursued.

A Scotch air raid warden said he saw one German plane plummet to the ground after it was attacked by two pursuit planes.

Over northeastern England another dogfight was watched from the ground.

British planes swarmed about a bomber which appeared after heavy explosions, then the barking of anti-aircraft guns were heard in the distance.

Many of the raiders were driven back to sea after meeting a hail of fire from batteries on the ground and fighter planes in the air.

"Bombs were dropped in several districts of southeastern Scotland," said Scottish regional commissioner Tom Johnson. "Fighters went up and anti-aircraft guns went into action. Three enemy planes were brought down."

The all-important question of what is to become of the French fleet, second largest in Europe, was answered by the official armistice stipulations, made public simultaneously, and by French Premier-Marshal Petain himself.

Prime Minister Churchill, accusing Petain of violating "solemn assurances" in handing over the fleet, earlier in the day had declared that Britain's safety "will be powerfully though not decisively affected by what happens to the French navy." He held out a faint hope that England still might salvage something of the French fleet through the empire outposts.

Just how much of the French sea and air power the Germans and Italians actually could get their hands on remained unanswered.

Some Units With British Fleet

Units of the French navy still were with the British fleet at Alexandria, Egypt, yesterday (Tuesday) and swarms of French planes winged their way southward over the Mediterranean during the armistice negotiations, ostensibly to carry on the fight from outposts there.

Germany promised solemnly however, under her armistice not to use French warships against Britain.

The official German armistice terms, following closely those made public in London Sunday, provide for complete French capitulation.

Under her separate armistice, reached Monday and paving the way for cessation of hostilities at 1:35 a. m. yesterday, Italy gets in addition:

1. "Full rights" over Jibuti, French Somaliland port and only rail outlet to Italian-conquered Ethiopia.

2. Demilitarized zones from thirty to one hundred and twenty miles wide in France, Tunis, Algeria and French Somaliland.

3. Italian troops will "stand on their advanced lines in all theaters of operations." This apparently means Italy will get little of France proper but will realize most, if not all, of her colonial claims.

Petain Explains Defeat

Petain, in a broadcast to his sorrowing people, told them the German invaders were "overwhelmingly superior" in every department, giving the government no other alternative but surrender.

For instance, in the second battle of the Aisne-Somme he said sixty French divisions, without fortifications, faced 150 German divisions with mechanized units. In other words 900,000 Frenchmen were matched against 2,250,000 better equipped Germans.

"The enemy crossed the Loire and then the remainder of France was defenseless," the aged Petain told his countrymen, observing their first day of dictated peace in mourning.

Germany meanwhile gave France to understand that any talk of final peace, supplementing the armistice already in force, would have to await a final German settlement of scores with Britain.

President Roosevelt, spurred into new action by the European events, announced a program of voluntary training for men nineteen to twenty-six years old who ultimately would receive commissions as officers in the naval reserve.

Five thousand men will be trained annually under the president's program, to be started in mid-July.

The statement that France must wait until Germany has completed her unfinished business with England was made by the well-informed Nazi commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland. It made remote any possibility of an early European peace conference.

Adolf Hitler set up a commission under General Heinrich Von Stuelpnagel to carry out the armistic terms while he preened his war machine for the battle of England.

Exultant Germans mingled their manifestations of jubilation over the French conquest with throaty renditions of the ancient German marching song—"we are sailing against England."

For Britain, steeling herself for the German onslaughts to come, it was a day of publicly expressed regrets.

Charging that the Petain government ordered the French navy handed over to Hitler in violation of "many solemn assurances," Churchill indicated Britain still might, somehow, take over the sea power of her defeated ally.

Churchill also hinted strongly that Britain expected to get valuable aid from units of the French empire refusing to recognize the surrender.

Fire Nazi Plane Factory

The British air force repaid a series of German night air rades with bombardments which the air ministry said fired a Nazi airplane factory at assel and smashed at other bases in western Germany and Nazi-occupied Netherlands.

In their attacks, the Germans said they rained bombs on British airports, airplane and industrial plants.

The axis powers were believed preparing to strike simultaneosly; Italy against objectives in the Mediterannean and East Africa and Germany directly against the British Isles.

Across the Mediterranean, Turkey and Iraq sought to form a common front against possible warfare in neighboring, French - mandated Syria where French forces were reported determined to fight on despite the mother country's surrender.

On the other side of the world Japan kept a close military and naval watch on French Indo-China. The Japanese said it was for the purpose of choking off China's supply route but there were predictions Tokyo might soon establish a protectorate over that French possession as well as the Dutch East Indies.

"The Authority on Authorities"

GET THAT RE-ENTRY OUT

IF YOU were on the defensive and saw in dummy an ace which could be used as a re-entry for an almost established suit, wouldn't you like to knock it out at once if you could? Wouldn't you hope that thereby you could kill the entire long cards of the suit, thereby depriving declarer of all those tricks? Then why not use the same tactics if you are declarer? When one of your opponents has a suit that threatens your No Trump game, your best move is often to knock out as early as possible the only card of entry he could possibly have in another suit

(Dealer: East. East-West vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♦	1 ♥	1 ♠
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 NT

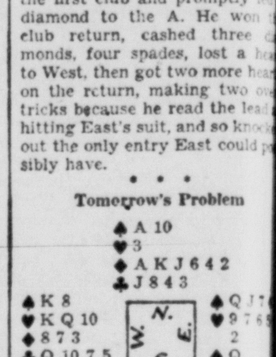

In an eleven-table tournament, there were three at which West bid his suit and against the No Trump game led his club 7. Let's follow the play at all three of these tables. In one case the declarer won the lead with the club K, went to dummy with the spade Q, tried hearts, losing the J finesse to the K, played dummy's club J on the return, losing to the Q, then took the third club with the A. He then ran his four spades and two hearts, but when he led a diamond to the A, East set him with club tricks.

At the second table, South and East win the first club and lead the second, then entered dummy with a spade and lost the heart finesse. West, having no more clubs, led his diamond single to East. A club return found the suit still stopped, so declarer made an overtrick.

At the third table, declarer won the first club and promptly led a diamond to the A. He won the club return, cashed three diamonds, four spades, lost a heart to West, then got two more heart on the return, making two odd tricks because he read the lead as hitting East's suit, and so knocked out the only entry East could possibly have.

Chicago Cubs Trim Brooklyn in Thirteenth

Five-Run Splurge Decides Long Game, 8-3

Home Run Smash by Phelps in Ninth Results in Overtime Battle

Clyde Passeau's Relief Twirling Gives Him Victory

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 25, (AP)—Chicago's Cinderellla Cubs scampered off Ebbets field with five runs just as the clock struck midnight tonight to take an 8 to 3 thirteen-inning victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Cubs spoiled Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin's return to a Dodger uniform by knocking him out in the sixth inning, but Brooklyn battled back to tie the score in the ninth on Babe Phelps's fifth homer of the season and then the clubs struggled fruitlessly until the Dodgers blew up in the unlucky thirteenth.

Chunky Dominic Dallessandro played a major role in Chicago's conquest, getting four hits including a triple and two doubles.

In the final inning after Bill Nicholson led off with a walk, Dallessandro drove him to third with a single and the important run crossed the plate when Pete Coscarart's throw home on Phil Cavarretta's grounder was too late.

Al Todd singled another run across and after Bob Mattick fouled out, pitcher Claude Passeau beat out a bunt and Dolph Camilli threw the ball into right field, letting two more runs score and Passeau reach third from where he too scored on a fly.

Passeau, third Chicago pitcher, checked the Dodgers without a hit in the four extra innings to get credit for the victory. The defeat was charged to Newt Kimball, last of four Dodger pitchers to see service.

Boy of 12 Real Member Of Hunt in Maryland

"Tally ho!" And close behind the master is a small, noble looking black pony with a tiny pink-coated rider. Astride this diminutive hunter of Good News is George Rexrode, twelve years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Rexrode, of Silver Springs, Md.

George is one of the few persons so young to have the distinction of wearing pink. He has also won many ribbons and trophies in the show ring.

Starting to ride at the age of ten years, it wasn't long before George was graduated from his saddle pony and started to learn the art of jumping. This was the first year he went into the show ring. In the winter of 1938 George became a member of the Manor Hunt in his own right, says "The Washington Post." There was never a jump or hazard of any type that daunted him.

Trout Stole Others' Bait, So Angler 'Tied' 'Em Up

W. A. Hill, of Great Falls, Mont., was the prize alibi during his years as deputy game warden is this one: Coming upon a fisherman casting in a stream where trout angling was forbidden but whitefish were legal catch, Hill noticed a number of live trout in the water tied with a string through their gills.

"Whose trout are these?" bellowed the warden.

"They belong to the state of Montana," the angler replied.

"Why are they tied?" Hill demanded.

"Those danged trout were taking bait so fast I couldn't catch any fish, so I just tied 'em up until I got through fishing," the intrepid fisherman explained.

The World Remains Full Of Bum Bums to Galento

PHILADELPHIA, June 25 —For one reason and another, the Relican-and-scrapple country around Philadelphia is also the Galento country. Down here they wonder why Joe Louis should be looking for new opponents. There's always Galento, isn't there?

Galento's enemies are apt to reply that it just seems like always. Be that as it may, the fat man's followers point out that Anthony was the guy who sat Louis down on the floor in the third round of their fight last year and dealt him a buffet in the first seconds of the first round that would have sent Joe flying back a city block if the ropes had not intervened. They argue that Galento is the one fighter who can bring suspense and excitement into the ring with Louis, because he brings his left hand along too, and his left hand is capable of very startling stuff.

What They Said

It may be that if the spherical saloon-keeper does well against Max Baer next week—knocks the beautiful Californian kicking—he'll earn another shot at Louis this summer. Mr. Galento tells your correspondent bluntly that Louis, while a nice fellow and one who has never struck a dumb animal or even a smart animal, must get out of Galento's way.

"I don't care how good the bum treats his mother," said Tony at the ringside of the Louis-Godooy fight the other night. "He's hurting my business. I would sell twice as many beers if I was the champion. So it's me or Louis, and I ain't gonna kid with him the next time. I'll knock his teeth through the back of his head."

It was sort of interesting to witness the reactions of the various heavyweight contenders and champions, past and present, who watched Louis knock out Godoy. Scattered around the ring, these fellows could be divided into two classes: (a) Those who may have to fight Louis in the future, and (b) those who have retired and are therefore perfectly safe.

Polled by this department, they spoke as follows:

JACK SHARKEY—"How could he lose? Godoy can't hit, and he didn't fight a lick."

ED. NOTE: Sharkey, in his fight with Louis, took one wide right-hand swing, missed, and began looking up planes to Boston.

GENE TUNNEY—"You certain-can't call Louis smart. He was a long time figuring out a simple problem."

ED. NOTE: It took Mr. Tunney eleven rounds to figure out Tom Heeney, who was a much simpler problem than Godoy and nowhere near as hard on the hands.

From Bow to Limb

Jack Dempsey—"Louis ain't a bad hitter."

ED. NOTE: Dempsey could hit pretty well too.

BILLY CONN—"Listen, nobody but a sap would let Louis or anybody else push him around like that. Louis won't push me around. I'll hit him with a million left hands."

ED. NOTE: Mr. Conn hit another guy with a million left hands once, and the fellow sent out for a hat. He thought it was snowing.

MAX BAER — "Boy, that Louis is terrific! He'll kill us all! How've ya been?"

ED NOTE: Mr. Baer loves to tell the truth in there once in a while, just to vary the routine.

TONY GALENTO—"Who the hell ever said Louis can't hit? He can hit, all right, but not as good as me. Who did he beat in there tonight? A bum."

ED. NOTE: Godoy is a bum who beat Mr. Galento twice in two chances.

Of course, Tony's record against Godoy tends to cloud the issue somewhat. Godoy was fully as tough as fat Anthony, if not a little tougher, but Galento's chance of beating Louis will always be better-than?Godoy's, because of a detail which doesn't always show in the box score. Galento can hit hard enough to knock Louis out. Godoy can't.

Thus, aside from the fact that he is old stuff to some of the customers, Tony is perhaps as logical a contender for the title as anyone else. His friends, who are known to the police as legion, insist that the fat man with the broccoli on his chest is the only living human who can beat the champion.

Before he gets another chance to do so—on July 2, in fact—Tony has a date with the fairest flower of Livermore, Calif., Max Baer. And this, according to Mr. Galento, is a mere formality.

"I will tear him from limb to limb," advises the popular beer container. (Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

Senators Register 7-6 Win over Chisox; Kuhel Hits Twelfth Homer

CHICAGO, June 25 (AP)—Washington's Senators defeated the Chicago White Sox, 7 to 6, at Comiskey park tonight behind the nine-hit pitching of Sid Hudson, rookie right hander. The Sox rallied for four of their runs in the ninth.

Singles by Julius Solters and Mike Tresh, Eric McNair's triple and Larry Rosenthal's homer with one on gave the White Sox their four runs in the final inning before Hudson could retire [illegible]. Up to that point Hudson had allowed only four hits.

The Senators collected fifteen hits off John Rigney, Pete Appleton and Clint Brown, Buddy Myer getting two singles and a double in five trips.

YOUNG MACK STAR

Al Brancato

Overshadowed in early season predictions by other promising rookies on the Philadelphia Athletic roster, Al Brancato, above, an infielder, has shown unusual ability for a first-year man and is playing regularly for the A's. Brancato, purchased from Williamsport, has but two years of pro baseball behind him.

Ted Williams, slugging Boston Red Sox outfielder, rests comfortably beneath an X-ray machine in Cleveland's Lakeside hospital. The X-ray showed Williams broke no bones when he collided with his teammate Roger Cramer, as they both went after a fly ball.

"Here's the Pitch; There Comes The Stretcher," Is New Phrase

Recent Epidemic of Beanings Threatens to Change Stock Expression

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—The recent epidemic of beanings, which threatens to change the stock expression of "here's the stretch; there comes the pitch," to "here's the pitch; there comes the stretcher," again emphasizes the major role injuries play in baseball races.

First it was Pee-Wee Reese; then Ducky Medwick; then Bill Jurges—all National leaguers, incidentally. Fortunately none of the accidents had tragic results, although the Jurges incident might be tragic from a Giant standpoint.

Medwick had not been with the Dodgers long enough for his absence to be felt. Skipper Leo Durocher stepped into Reese's shoes so there was no lost motion there.

But in the case of Jurges, the Giant shortstop is the key man of his infield, a clutch hitter, and an all-around valuable man. It is recalled that any pennant hopes the Giants might have cherished last year vanished when he was suspended in July for ten days after his moist argument with Umpire George Magerkurth.

Jurges may not be out that long this time as a result of being felled by one of Bucky Walters's pitches last Sunday, but it might be long enough to destroy the delicate balance of the Giants.

Teamwork Big Factor

For the Giants are a team of balance. Bill Terry isn't working with a team of stars this year. He has some men of better than average ability, such as Harry Danning, Jurges, Burgess Whitehead, and currently at least, Jo-Jo Moore, but it has been the team play as a whole which has kept the club near the top and confounded the critics.

Aside from hit batsmen, other injuries assume leading roles. In the National League the Red shortstop, Billy Myers, sliced his arm opening a window, and although the Reds seem to be doing quite well without him, they might do even better with him. The Cards were touched by the jinx Sunday when Bob Bowman was spiked. It's too early to tell what effect this might have, but it could be disastrous if Bowman was out any length of time.

In the American League the serious contenders all have had their troubles. The Red Sox lost Bobby Doerr for a spell, and now Ted Williams is out as a result of a collision with Roger Cramer. Why is it the good players are the ones who get hurt, anyway?

Cleveland's troubles have been of a different nature, with the injury only to the feelings of Oscar Vitt. The Indians were so upset by Uncle Oz and his methods that they barely could climb into first place.

As for the Yankees, they were without the services of Joe DiMaggio early in the season, but otherwise they have been fortunate from an injury standpoint. The Yanks are jes' tahrd, that's all.

Every spring the managers, after painting a glowing word-picture of their teams' prospects, always close their remarks—it comes right after the "we'll give 'em all a battle" clause—with the stock expression, ". . . if we escape injuries."

No Handicap to Reds

That covers a multitude of sins, as a team's pitching might flop, the team as a whole might suffer from falling batting averages, and the skipper still could point to the bruised knuckle outfielder Joe Doakes suffered in a crap grame as the cause of all the trouble.

But ordinarily it tells the story of the difference between just a contender and a champion, and it takes a champion to survive an epidemic of injuries. The Reds did it last year. Time will tell which teams in both leagues can do it this year.

Pitched 75 Games

William White pitched seventy-five games for Cincinnati in 1879 and the folowing year the Chicago team was christened the "White Stockings" or "Anson's Colts." It won twenty-one consecutive games under Anson and the pennant, with a record of sixty-seven won and seventeen lost, for a percentaage of .798, the highest ever attained by a team in the major leagues.

Buffalo 4-3, Syracuse 0-4.

Corriganville and LaVale remained deadlocked for first place in the Allegany County Softball League as a result of victories scored yesterday by both teams.

LaVale eked out a 5 to 4 decision over Ellerslie at the latter place while Corriganville bested Potomac Valley, 6 to 4.

In other contests Narrows Park downed the Clary Club, 7 to 6 and Wilkinson's Grocers subdued Stringtown, 6 to 3.

Leo Kisamore, of LaVale, turned in a three-hit performance in mastering Ellerslie. It was Kisamore's fourth straight pitching triumph and he has yielded only nine hits in the four contests. He also was the game's batting star with two doubles to his credit.

In the Corriganville - Potomac Valley game, played on the latter's field, Helmick's two-bagger which scored two runs and a triple and double by Jack Often were the batting features for the winning club. Lewis knocked a home run and L. Stoffer cracked out two singles to pace the P. V. attack.

Schoenadel's single and Eddie Hogsdon's double in the seventh and final inning gave Narrows Park a hairline decision over the Clary Club. Eddie Price poled a home run and Hartsock connected for a pair of two-baggers in three trips to the plate.

Chicago Cubs Trim Brooklyn in Thirteenth

Clyde Passeau's Relief Twirling Gives Him Victory

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 25, (AP)—Chicago's Cinderellla Cubs scampered off Ebbets field with five runs just as the clock struck midnight tonight to take an 8 to 3 thirteen-inning victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Cubs spoiled Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin's return to a Dodger uniform by knocking him out in the sixth inning, but Brooklyn battled back to tie the score in the ninth on Babe Phelps's fifth homer of the season and then the clubs struggled fruitlessly until the Dodgers blew up in the unlucky thirteenth.

Chunky Dominic Dallessandro played a major role in Chicago's conquest, getting four hits including a triple and two doubles.

In the final inning after Bill Nicholson led off with a walk, Dallessandro drove him to third with a single and the important run crossed the plate when Pete Coscarart's throw home on Phil Cavarretta's grounder was too late.

Al Todd singled another run across and after Bob Mattick fouled out, pitcher Claude Passeau beat out a bunt and Dolph Camilli threw the ball into right field, letting two more runs score and Passeau reach third from where he too scored on a fly.

Passeau, third Chicago pitcher, checked the Dodgers without a hit in the four extra innings to get credit for the victory. The defeat was charged to Newt Kimball, last of four Dodger pitchers to see service.

The World Remains Full Of Bum Bums to Galento

PHILADELPHIA, June 25 —For one reason and another, the Relican-and-scrapple country around Philadelphia is also the Galento country. Down here they wonder why Joe Louis should be looking for new opponents. There's always Galento, isn't there?

Galento's enemies are apt to reply that it just seems like always. Be that as it may, the fat man's followers point out that Anthony was the guy who sat Louis down on the floor in the third round of their fight last year and dealt him a buffet in the first seconds of the first round that would have sent Joe flying back a city block if the ropes had not intervened. They argue that Galento is the one fighter who can bring suspense and excitement into the ring with Louis, because he brings his left hand along too, and his left hand is capable of very startling stuff.

What They Said

It may be that if the spherical saloon-keeper does well against Max Baer next week—knocks the beautiful Californian kicking—he'll earn another shot at Louis this summer. Mr. Galento tells your correspondent bluntly that Louis, while a nice fellow and one who has never struck a dumb animal or even a smart animal, must get out of Galento's way.

"I don't care how good the bum treats his mother," said Tony at the ringside of the Louis-Godooy fight the other night, "He's hurting my business. I would sell twice as many beers if I was the champion. So it's me or Louis, and I ain't gonna kid with him the next time. I'll knock his teeth through the back of his head."

It was sort of interesting to witness the reactions of the various heavyweight contenders and champions, past and present, who watched Louis knock out Godoy. Scattered around the ring, these fellows could be divided into two classes: (a) Those who may have to fight Louis in the future, and (b) those who have retired and are therefore perfectly safe.

Polled by this department, they spoke as follows:

JACK SHARKEY—"How could he lose? Godoy can't hit, and he didn't fight a lick."

ED. NOTE: Sharkey, in his fight with Louis, took one wide right-hand swing, missed, and began looking up planes to Boston.

GENE TUNNEY—"You certain-can't call Louis smart. He was a long time figuring out a simple problem."

ED. NOTE: It took Mr. Tunney eleven rounds to figure out Tom Heeney, who was a much simpler problem than Godoy and nowhere near as hard on the hands.

From Bow to Limb

Jack Dempsey—"Louis ain't a bad hitter."

ED. NOTE: Dempsey could hit pretty well too.

BILLY CONN—"Listen, nobody but a sap would let Louis or anybody else push him around like that. Louis won't push me around. I'll hit him with a million left hands."

ED. NOTE: Mr. Conn hit another guy with a million left hands once, and the fellow sent out for a hat. He thought it was snowing.

MAX BAER — "Boy, that Louis is terrific! He'll kill us all! How've ya been?"

ED NOTE: Mr. Baer loves to tell the truth in there once in a while, just to vary the routine.

TONY GALENTO—"Who the hell ever said Louis can't hit? He can hit, all right, but not as good as me. Who did he beat in there tonight? A bum."

ED. NOTE: Godoy is a bum who beat Mr. Galento twice in two chances.

Of course, Tony's record against Godoy tends to cloud the issue somewhat. Godoy was fully as tough as fat Anthony, if not a little tougher, but Galento's chance of beating Louis will always be better-than?Godoy's, because of a detail which doesn't always show in the box score. Galento can hit hard enough to knock Louis out. Godoy can't.

Thus, aside from the fact that he is old stuff to some of the customers, Tony is perhaps as logical a contender for the title as anyone else. His friends, who are known to the police as legion, insist that the fat man with the broccoli on his chest is the only living human who can beat the champion.

Before he gets another chance to do so—on July 2, in fact—Tony has a date with the fairest flower of Livermore, Calif., Max Baer. And this, according to Mr. Galento, is a mere formality.

"I will tear him from limb to limb," advises the popular beer container. (Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

Senators Register 7-6 Win over Chisox; Kuhel Hits Twelfth Homer

CHICAGO, June 25 (AP)—Washington's Senators defeated the Chicago White Sox, 7 to 6, at Comiskey park tonight behind the nine-hit pitching of Sid Hudson, rookie right hander. The Sox rallied for four of their runs in the ninth.

Singles by Julius Solters and Mike Tresh, Eric McNair's triple and Larry Rosenthal's homer with one on gave the White Sox their four runs in the final inning before Hudson could retire [illegible]. Up to that point Hudson had allowed only four hits.

The Senators collected fifteen hits off John Rigney, Pete Appleton and Clint Brown, Buddy Myer getting two singles and a double in five trips.

YOUNG MACK STAR

Al Brancato

Overshadowed in early season predictions by other promising rookies on the Philadelphia Athletic roster, Al Brancato, above, an infielder, has shown unusual ability for a first-year man and is playing regularly for the A's. Brancato, purchased from Williamsport, has but two years of pro baseball behind him.

X-RAY O. K's TED WILLIAMS

Ted Williams

Ted Williams, slugging Boston Red Sox outfielder, rests comfortably beneath an X-ray machine in Cleveland's Lakeside hospital. The X-ray showed Williams broke no bones when he collided with his teammate, Roger Cramer, as they both went after a fly ball.

"Here's the Pitch; There Comes The Stretcher," Is New Phrase

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—The recent epidemic of beanings, which threatens to change the stock expression of "here's the stretch; there comes the pitch," to "here's the pitch; there comes the stretcher," again emphasizes the major role injuries play in baseball races.

First it was Pee-Wee Reese; then Ducky Medwick; then Bill Jurges—all National leaguers, incidentally. Fortunately none of the accidents had tragic results, although the Jurges incident might be tragic from a Giant standpoint.

Medwick had not been with the Dodgers long enough for his absence to be felt. Skipper Leo Durocher stepped into Reese's shoes so there was no lost motion there.

But in the case of Jurges, the Giant shortstop is the key man of his infield, a clutch hitter, and an all-around valuable man. It is recalled that any pennant hopes the Giants might have cherished last year vanished when he was suspended in July for ten days after his moist argument with Umpire George Magerkurth.

Jurges may not be out that long this time as a result of being felled by one of Bucky Walters's pitches last Sunday, but it might be long enough to destroy the delicate balance of the Giants.

Teamwork Big Factor

For the Giants are a team of balance. Bill Terry isn't working with a team of stars this year. He has some men of better than average ability, such as Harry Danning, Jurges, Burgess Whitehead, and currently at least, Jo-Jo Moore, but it has been the team play as a whole which has kept the club near the top and confounded the critics.

Aside from hit batsmen, other injuries assume leading roles. In the National League the Red shortstop, Billy Myers, sliced his arm opening a window, and although the Reds seem to be doing quite well without him, they might do even better with him. The Cards were touched by the jinx Sunday when Bob Bowman was spiked. It's too early to tell what effect this might have, but it could be disastrous if Bowman was out any length of time.

In the American League the serious contenders all have had their troubles. The Red Sox lost Bobby Doerr for a spell, and now Ted Williams is out as a result of a collision with Roger Cramer. Why is it the good players are the ones who get hurt, anyway?

Cleveland's troubles have been of a different nature, with the injury only to the feelings of Oscar Vitt. The Indians were so upset by Uncle Oz and his methods that they barely could climb into first place.

As for the Yankees, they were without the services of Joe DiMaggio early in the season, but otherwise they have been fortunate from an injury standpoint. The Yanks are jes' tahrd, that's all.

Every spring the managers, after painting a glowing word-picture of their teams' prospects, always close their remarks—it comes right after the "we'll give 'em all a battle" clause—with the stock expression, ". . . if we escape injuries."

No Handicap to Reds

That covers a multitude of sins, as a team's pitching might flop, the team as a whole might suffer from falling batting averages, and the skipper still could point to the bruised knuckle outfielder Joe Doakes suffered in a crap grame as the cause of all the trouble.

But ordinarily it tells the story of the difference between just a contender and a champion, and it takes a champion to survive an epidemic of injuries. The Reds did it last year. Time will tell which teams in both leagues can do it this year.

Pitched 75 Games

William White pitched seventy-five games for Cincinnati in 1879 and the folowing year the Chicago team was christened the "White Stockings" or "Anson's Colts." It won twenty-one consecutive games under Anson and the pennant, with a record of sixty-seven won and seventeen lost, for a percentaage of .798, the highest ever attained by a team in the major leagues.

Corriganville and LaVale remained deadlocked for first place in the Allegany County Softball League as a result of victories scored yesterday by both teams.

LaVale eked out a 5 to 4 decision over Ellerslie at the latter place while Corriganville bested Potomac Valley, 6 to 4.

In other contests Narrows Park downed the Clary Club, 7 to 6 and Wilkinson's Grocers subdued Stringtown, 6 to 3.

Leo Kisamore, of LaVale, turned in a three-hit performance in mastering Ellerslie. It was Kisamore's fourth straight pitching triumph and he has yielded only nine hits in the four contests. He also was the game's batting star with two doubles to his credit.

In the Corriganville - Potomac Valley game, played on the latter's field, Helmick's two-bagger which scored two runs and a triple and double by Jack Often were the batting features for the winning club. Lewis knocked a home run and I. Stoffer cracked out two singles to pace the P. V. attack.

Schoenadel's single and Eddie Bogsdon's double in the seventh and final inning gave Narrows Park a hairline decision over the Clary Club. Eddie Price poled a home run and Hartsock connected for a pair of two-baggers in three trips to the plate.

Former Pittsburgh Player Hits for Circuit with Two Aboard

Corsairs Put on Clincher with Six-Run Splurge in Seventh

PHILADELPHIA, June 25 (AP) — Johnny Rizzo blasted a three-run homer today against his former teammates from Pittsburgh but the Phillies never quite caught up and lost the opening game of a series 9-7.

The Pirates landed on Kirby Higbe for fifteen hits while the Phils got fourteen bingles of their own, driving Max Butcher and Johnny Lanning from the mound.

Pittsburgh jumped away to a one run lead in the second with Al Lopez singling Elbie Fletcher home after Vince DiMaggio hit into a double play. The Phillies came back with two runs in their half of the inning on three singles and a walk.

In the third Pittsburgh scored twice on a walk and two doubles. The Bucks put on the clincher in the seventh with a six-run splurge featuring safeties by Elliott, Bill Brubaker, Arky Vaughan, Joe Bowman, Lopez and Frankie Gustine.

Newhouser Hurls Four-Hit Game Against Bosox

Detroit Takes Nightcap, 5-1 after Dropping Opener, 11-7

DETROIT, June 25 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers kept their hold on second place in the American League race today, splitting a double bill with the Boston Red Sox.

Youthful Harold Newhouser scattered four hits in the nightcap to give the Tigers a 5 to 1 victory after Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe suffered his first defeat of the season in the opener which the Red Sox won, 11 to 7.

The 19-year-old Newhouser, in winning his fifth triumph as against four losses, pitched brilliantly, striking out seven. He retired the side in the fifth inning on strikes and in five innings held the Red Sox hitless.

Boston scored its lone run in the first when Dominic DiMaggio led off with a double, took third on a fielder's choice, and came home on an infield out.

From then until the seventh the Red Sox failed to get a blow off the Tiger rookie while his teammates, hitting opportunely, routed started Denny Galehouse in the third with a three-run rally after scoring twice in the first. Maurice Harris and Joe Heving followed Galehouse, charged with the defeat, to the mound.

Although touched for fourteen hits, Jack Wilson went the route for Boston, weathering a belated Detroit rally in the ninth. With four runs in on six hits, Wilson struck out Pinky Higgins and Pinch-hitter Lynn (Line Drive) Nelson to end the game.

Corsairs Put on Clincher with Six-Run Splurge in Seventh

PHILADELPHIA, June 25 (AP) — Johnny Rizzo blasted a three-run homer today against his former teammates from Pittsburgh but the Phillies never quite caught up and lost the opening game of a series 9-7.

The Pirates landed on Kirby Higbe for fifteen hits while the Phils got fourteen bingles of their own, driving Max Butcher and Johnny Lanning from the mound.

Pittsburgh jumped away to a one run lead in the second with Al Lopez singling Elbie Fletcher home after Vince DiMaggio hit into a double play. The Phillies came back with two runs in their half of the inning on three singles and a walk.

In the third Pittsburgh scored twice on a walk and two doubles. The Bucks put on the clincher in the seventh with a six-run splurge featuring safeties by Elliott, Bill Brubaker, Arky Vaughan, Joe Bowman, Lopez and Frankie Gustine.

Trozzo's and Whirlwinds Mark Up Victories

Trozzo's Whirlwinds retained their one game edge in the championship race of the South End Softball League by defeating the Davis Gassers yesterday by the score of 4 to 2 at Taylor Field. It was the Whirlwinds' twenty-first victory in twenty-four starts.

Lacy's Delicatets remained right on the heels of the pace setters by conquering the Golden Bakers, 8 to 3, on the Penn Avenue field. The Delicaatets hold second place in the league with a record of twenty triumphs and four setbacks.

Today at Penn field Post's will play the Delicatets and Liberty will face the Whirlwinds while on Taylor field King's will play the Davis Gassers and Golden's Bakers will oppose the Candy Kitchen tossers.

Luke Hamlin Rejoins Brooklyn Team

BROOKLYN, June 25 (AP)—Pitcher Luke Hamlin donned a Brooklyn Dodger uniform again tonight exactly one week after he quit the club in a huff because President Larry MacPhail rebuked him for throwing a home run ball in a game with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Hamlin and MacPhail settled their differences at a conference late today, but no announcement was made by club officials, who previously had refused to discuss Hamlin's absence.

Gassers Seek Tenth Straight Victory

The undefeated Keegan Gassers will oppose the Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club in the feature contest of the City Softball League today at Mapleside. The Gassers will be seeking their tenth consecutive triumph.

In other contests Bowman's and the Police Boys' Club will clash at North End and West Side will play Potomac News at Community Park.

North End Sluggers To Meet Tonight

The North End Sluggers, members of the North End Playground league, will hold a business meeting today at 7:00 p. m., in their clubhouse. Manager Bob Herboldsheimer urges all members of the team to be present, as contracts must be signed preparatory to the opening of the league next week, and other important matters will be taken up.

Newhouser Hurls Four-Hit Game Against Bosox

Detroit Takes Nightcap, 5-1 after Dropping Opener, 11-7

DETROIT, June 25 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers kept their hold on second place in the American League race today, splitting a double bill with the Boston Red Sox.

Youthful Harold Newhouser scattered four hits in the nightcap to give the Tigers a 5 to 1 victory after Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe suffered his first defeat of the season in the opener which the Red Sox won, 11 to 7.

The 19-year-old Newhouser, in winning his fifth triumph as against four losses, pitched brilliantly, striking out seven. He retired the side in the fifth inning on strikes and in five innings held the Red Sox hitless.

Boston scored its lone run in the first when Dominic DiMaggio led off with a double, took third on a fielder's choice, and came home on an infield out.

From then until the seventh the Red Sox failed to get a blow off the Tiger rookie while his teammates, hitting opportunely, routed started Denny Galehouse in the third with a three-run rally after scoring twice in the first. Maurice Harris and Joe Heving followed Galehouse, charged with the defeat, to the mound.

Although touched for fourteen hits, Jack Wilson went the route for Boston, weathering a belated Detroit rally in the ninth. With four runs in on six hits, Wilson struck out Pinky Higgins and Pinch-hitter Lynn (Line Drive) Nelson to end the game.

Detroit Will Install Lighting System

DETROIT, June 25 (AP)—Owner Walter O. Briggs, of the Detroit Tigers, announced today he had asked for plans for a lighting system at Briggs stadium.

"The system will probably be installed so that we can play night baseball if we desire during the season of 1941," Briggs, who has always been opposed to night games, explained.

Hal Trosky Hits Two Home Runs For Indians

Fourth Straight Defeat Drops New York Ten Games Behind

Al Milnar's Eleventh Win Boosts Ohioans' Lead to 2 1-2 Games

CLEVELAND, June 25 (AP)—With Hal Trosky hitting his sixteenth and seventeenth home runs of the season, the pace-making Cleveland Indians pounced on the New York Yankees again today for a 5 to 3 victory before rain halted the game at the end of the fifth inning.

It was the fourth consecutive defeat for the Yanks and their ninth in ten games, dropping the World Champions ten games behind the leaders and jeopardizing their berth in the American League's first division.

The Indians scored three runs off Monte Pearson in the first inning on a two-run homer by Roy Weatherly and the first of Trosky's round-trippers. Trosky's other clout along with a walk and two singles brought two more runs in the third.

This was enough for Lefty Al Milnar's eleventh victory, although the Yanks roughed him up in the third with three runs on Frank Crosetti's double, a walk, Charley Keller's triple and a single by Joe DiMaggio.

The triumph raised the Tribe to 2½ games over the Detroit Tigers.

FACING THE STORM

The day of creams, of golden dreams, is over.
A new day dawns upon the glint of steel.
There is no peace for those who seek the clover
To shrink from pain a battered world must feel.
The hour has struck, where cool, and calm, and steady,
By hill and stream, from vale to upland crag,
We get the might of all our legions ready
To face the hurried summons of the flag.

The day of softness ends—old faiths are falling
Before the deadly fury of the storm.
On each gray wind you hear your banner calling
For steel wrought fibre where the platoons form.
"Too late—too late"—we've heard too many crying
From shattered lands sunk deeper than the grave.
Can we dream on, amid a world that's dying
Unless there be an answer from its brave?
This is the day of steel—of mailed fist smashing
Upon your door and mine—before too long.
Around you now the life you knew is crashing,
Where all that matters are the swift and strong.
This is no time for weaklings who may cower
Before the lightning flashing at our gate.
The four winds call us to the striking hour
Who have, at last, our rendezvous with fate.

The Browns Push On

One of the rousing features of the American League pennant tangle is the advance of the St. Louis Browns. They started well, fell back, looked as though they were through and then came on again. Within the past ten days they have struck two terrific blows. They checked the upward sweep of the Yankees by beating them in both games of a double-header and knocked the Red Sox out of first place by doing the same to them.

This is the team that figured to finish seventh—or eighth. Its spring exhibition victories over minor league clubs were discounted. It had no pitching, no punch and no spirit. How could it have any spirit? Most of the players had been with other and better clubs and their assignment to the Browns was only a sentence to the depths. Naturally they were unhappy. How could they play ball in that frame of mind?

Everybody forgot about Fred Haney. This is Haney's second year as manager of the Browns. He didn't do much, so far as winning ball games was concerned, last year. Now, in the matter of victories the Browns are nearly six weeks ahead of their 1939 pace. But he was working quietly trying to put a team together. He had almost succeeded by the time the season ended. Almost—but he still didn't have any pitchers.

They Are Hitting

He still has no wonder staff but every once in a while he gets an exceptionally well-pitched game from Niggeling or Bildilli or Trotning falters he gets some solid hitnig falters he gets some solid hitting from Radcliff, McQuinn, Laabs, Hoag, Clift and Berardino.

Radcliffe—always a deadly menace to the Yankees, incidentally—has been hammering away from the start, staying among the top five hitters, leading the league part of the time.

Haney has a modest ambition this year. He would like to finish fifth. He may do it, at that. He has put the Athletics and the Senators very definitely behind him and is concentrating now on the White Sox. He has no hope of beating out any of the others. But the top of the second division would suit him very nicely.

Browns Are Popular

Improvement by the Browns stirs real interest in St. Louis which, through all the vicissitudes of its American League representatives, has remained in sentiment an American League town. Even when the Gas House Cardinals, one of the most colorful teams ever put together, were at their peak, there was much less enthusiasm for them in St. Louis than there was elsewhere. The same kind of team in Brown uniforms would have packed Sportsman's Park to the bulging point.

Eighteen years have fled since the Browns wielded a real pennant threat. That was in 1922, when they fought the Yankees down to the last bitter ditch and the town was in an uproar. Since then they have been up and down—seldom very far up, usually very far down. Managers have come and gone—come in hopefully and gone out muttering to themselves. Players—some of them at any rate—have looked upon St. Louis as the last resting place in the major leagues—the last stop on the way to the minors.

Through Hard Times

The club has been hard pressed for cash since the death of Phil Ball, last of the old-time magnates who fought against Ban Johnson during the Federal League war—and then fought so hard for him in the last days of Johnson's command in the American League. Ball poured millions of dollars into the club—it cost him about $200,000 a year, he told me once—and thought he was going to win a pennant at last when he hired Rogers Hornsby as his manager. But he died shortly thereafter and the club staggered on its way and Hornsby passed from the scene.

Night baseball has helped the Browns financially—so much so that the club recently obtained permission to play fourteen games instead of the allotted seven this year. The take from these games should make it possible for Donald Barnes to become an active bidder for better ball players and not—as it has been up to now—have to rely on the players the wealthier clubs want to give him in trade.

Up—Or Down—Fighting

Meanwhile, Haney is doing a fine job. Fred is quiet, smiles a lot and seldom gets into rows with the umpires and his name doesn't get into the papers as often as the names of some other managers. But he is a fighter when it comes to winning ball games—or trying to win them.

He was doing all right as a minor league manager and didn't take the St. Louis job in desperation. He took it believing he could dispel the atmosphere of defeat that so long had lain like a cloud over the Browns' dugout. He has done that in his second year in charge. He may wind up in fifth place, the goal he has set for himself this year, or he may fall back, although I don't think he will go any lower than sixth. But no matter which way he goes, up or down, he'll go fighting. Under him, the Browns no longer take defeats lying down.

K. of C. vs. Elks

Scoring nine runs in the third inning the Cumberland B. P. O. Elks defeated the Junior Association of Commerce by the score of 11 to 8 yesterday at Fort Hill field in a Rocking Chair Softball League game. The victory enabled the Elks to increase their first place lead to one full game over the K. of C.

The game was marked by the stellar relief pitching of Jim Wilkinson, of the Association, and Wallis, of the Elks. Wilkinson came on the scene to relieve Cowherd in the third after eight runs had crossed the platter and third base was occupied. After a wild pitch had sent over the ninth tally in the inning, Wilkinson let the Elks down with a single blow in the last 3⅔ innings while holding the opposition runless. Wallis supplanted Mosner in the fourth and pitched shutout ball the last three frames, yielding but two safeties.

Allan Underdonk, of the Elks, hit for the circuit, Henry Buirge connected for a double and two singles and Mosner banged out a triple. Fred Hetzel was the "big gun" for the Association with two singles while Gene Howell and Cowherd each smacked out a two-bagger.

GAME THURSDAY

K. of C. vs. Elks

Scoring nine runs in the third inning the Cumberland B. P. O. Elks defeated the Junior Association of Commerce by the score of 11 to 8 yesterday at Fort Hill field in a Rocking Chair Softball League game. The victory enabled the Elks to increase their first place lead to one full game over the K. of C.

The game was marked by the stellar relief pitching of Jim Wilkinson, of the Association, and Wallis, of the Elks. Wilkinson came on the scene to relieve Cowherd in the third after eight runs had crossed the platter and third base was occupied. After a wild pitch had sent over the ninth tally in the inning, Wilkinson let the Elks down with a single blow in the last 3⅔ innings while holding the opposition runless. Wallis supplanted Mosner in the fourth and pitched shutout ball the last three frames, yielding but two safeties.

Allan Underdonk, of the Elks, hit for the circuit. Henry Buirge connected for a double and two singles and Mosner banged out a triple. Fred Hetzel was the "big gun" for the Association with two singles while Gene Howell and Cowherd each smacked out a two-bagger.

JOE LOUIS LOOKS OVER MAX BAER

Joe Louis, world's heavyweight champion, drops into the Pompton Lakes, N. J., training camp of Max Baer, who is readying for his bout with Tony Galento in Jersey City, July 2. Louis seems to be intensely interested in the manner in which Baer has his hands taped just before a set-to with a sparring partner.

Barney Gedwillas Wins Marathon Race

Barney Gedwillas, 27-year-old distance runner of Thomas, W. Va., making his debut as a marathon runner, won the National A. A. U. thirty - kilometer championship run which was staged as an opening day feature of the Republican National Convention program Monday in Philadelphia.

Gedwillas, an alumnus of West Virginia university, finished seventy-five yards ahead of Don Heinicke, of Baltimore, in the 18 1-3 miles events. Joe Sullivan, of Philadelphia, was third. The winner's time was one hour and fifty minutes.

Police gave Gedwillas restoratives at the end of the race as he was exhausted.

CIO Unionist Asks $10,000 For Assault

AFofL Teamsters Union, Four Members Sued By Robert Nazelrod

A clash between rival unions last April yesterday wound up in Circuit court with the filing of a $10,000 damage suit against the AFofL Teamsters and Chauffeurs union, its acting business agent and three of its members.

The plaintiff is Robert G. Nazelrod, an official of the CIO construction union, who claims that Charles E. Stutzman, Kenneth A. Rasbaugh, William G. Randolph and Leroy L. DeVore assaulted him April 3 "with force and arms, beat, wounded and ill-treated him so that his life was despaired of."

The assault, for which Rasbaugh was jailed and Stutzman and Rudolph were fined, climaxed a dispute over entrance of the CIO into the construction field and particularly its taking over a job that the AFofA construction union had refused to work on when the owner became involved in a dispute with the Teamsters union.

Nazelrod claims he is permanently injured as a result of the attack and is unable to work.

Injuries he received included severe lacerations of the head, abrasions, contusions of the head and shoulders and a permanent injury to his shoulder, the petition states.

Nazelrod asserts he was confined for a long period of time as a result of the assault and incurred large medical, surgical and hospital bills.

William H. Geppert is counsel for the plaintiff.

$10,000 Damages Asked in Crash

Multiple Injuries Listed by Women

Two suits calling for a total of $10,000 damages were docketed in Circuit Court yesterday against Ellsworth Burall, the result of an accident last October.

The suits were brought by Mrs. Mary E. Woolard and Mrs. Margaret E. Brooks who claim they received severe injuries due to Burall's reckless and negligent driving. Each asks $5,000.

According to the petition filed by Attorney Elmer E. Gower, the accident occurred on Route 40 in LaVale and wrecked the plaintiff's car and injured both passengers.

Injuries received by Mrs. Woolard included a permanently sprained back, a crushed side, injured left arm and shoulder and neck injuries, the suit states.

Mrs. Brooks, the owner of the car, claims she suffered a broken left arm, a concussion of the blood vessels and nerves of the right leg and an eye injury that permanently injured her eyesight.

Ralph James Wins Novel Rotary Contest

Ralph James was the winner of the final prize, amounting to ninety-one cents, in a novel quiz program carried out by the Rotary club at its weekly luncheon yesterday at the Fort Cumberland hotel.

The program was a pinch-hit affair, the speaker engaged for the occasion having been called away from the city unexpectedly, and Charles S. Catherman, program chairman, connived with Charles A. Piper in arranging the contest.

Instead of having the usual teams, questions were asked members who were called on at random. Those failing paid fines of ten cents each, and those answering correctly received a like sum. Prompters were subjected to a fine of twenty-five cents if unable to answer a hard question.

The quiz proved to be both enlightening and amusing.

The Daily treasury statement last Friday showed a $250,000,000 increase in government gold holdings.

Poultry Farmer Charged With Quadruple Slaying

NORFOLK, Va., June 25 (AP) — A sixty-four-year-old poultry peddler was charged today with killing his 28-year-old wife and their three children, whose bodies were found dangling from ropes in their chickenhouse yesterday.

T. G. Casteen, Norfolk county officer, obtained the warrant charging Charles C. Sanderlin with the quadruple slaying from Magistrate J. Stroud Roper.

The farmwife and her three children—Charles, seven; Louis, five, and Emily, six months—died of strangulation, Coroner L. C. Ferebee said after examining two of the bodies.

Under the questioning of county police, Sanderlin insisted he had been ill and had not seen his wife for five hours before he rose from bed to find the bodies in the henhouse. The bodies of Mrs. Sanderlin and the two older children were suspended from the rafters by light ropes. The baby was hanging from a rope wound about her mother's arm.

Red Cross To Receive Proceeds From Softball League Tilts

With Mayor Harry Irvine tossing out the first ball, a series of soft ball games in the "Rocking Chair League" will be played for the war relief fund of Allegany county chapter of the American Red Cross, Thursday, at 5:30 p. m. at Community Park.

Two games will be played between the Elks and the Knights of Columbus. The regular teams will play the first game; but the second will be played by members of the two clubs weighing more than 200 pounds.

For the benefit of the players in the second game, rocking chairs will be provided at all bases, and a truck will be available to take them home. Girls dressed as Red Cross nurses will also be present.

Guests Invited

William A. Gunter and John B. Mordock are co-chairman of the promotion committee for the war relief fund in Allegany county.

Collection of cardboard cartons which were placed several weeks ago for donations to the fund, is being made now, according to Thomas F. Conlon, chairman of the carton committee.

Boxes Collected

Yesterday's reports from the committee showed that more than $140 had been received from boxes placed in the South End and the West Side schools.

Members of the committee plan to collect all other cartons in the city this week. Boxes in the county will remain until the local committees close their drive.

Funds obtained in the war relief drive now being conducted throughout the nation by the American Red Cross will be used to buy food, clothing, medications and surgical supplies for war-wounded and civilian refugees in Europe.

Contributions are being received locally at the war relief headquarters, 45 North Liberty street, Lichtenstein's Pharmacy, and the Truitt Drug store, Virginia avenue.

Trooper Outnumbered, Driver Acquitted

State Trooper John H. Doud was badly outnumbered in Trial Magistrate court yesterday when he pressed a speeding charge against Robert C. Norris, of Flintstone.

Doud was the only prosecution witness, and Norris was acquitted.

Big Bond Issue Is Voted Down At Hyndman, Pa.

305 Citizens against Spending $26,000 For Sewerage System

HYNDMAN, Pa., June 25 —Voters of Hyndman today decided that they do not want a sanitary sewerage system and sewerage disposal plant by defeating the proposed $26,000 bond issue at the polls by 305 to 105 votes in a special election. A total of 410 ballots was cast.

If the vote had carried, the general plan called for the work to be done as a WPA project, the tentative cost to the borough being estimated at $26,000. It was proposed to charge the owner of each improved property the sum of forty dollars for a tap fee. The increase in tax-millage was figured at $1.70 per thousand dollars of assessed valuation over a twenty-year period.

It was pointed out that if sufficient owners could have been induced to pay the forty-dollar tap fee within twelve months following construction of the project, it was thought that this millage could be reduced to one dollar a thousand (assessed valuation) covering a period of two decades.

Italy Gets

territory for which the Italians long have been clamoring.

In addition to full rights over Jibuti, Italy got control of the French section of the railway running from that Gulf of Aden port to Addis Ababa, capital of Italian-conquered thiopia.

Demilitarized zones will be established in France, Tunis, and French Somaliland, ranging from thirty to one hundred and twenty miles in width. French troops must be withdrawn in ten days.

The zone of military occupation in France proper includes a narrow Alpine border area taken by Premier Mussolini's forces in their fourteen days of war against France.

It extends a short distance into France from the Swiss frontier to the Mediterranean, including Briancon in the north and Menton, Mediterranean port. Briancon is about five miles from the frontier, Menton about a mile.

For the duration of hostilities between Italy and Britain, and for the duration of the Armistice, the French Somaliland coast in North Africa is to be demilitarized entirely.

The agreement contained a clause similar to that in the French-German armistice requiring that the French fleet be surrendered at ports stipulated by German and Italian authorities.

Also like the clause in the French-German armistice, the French-Italian pact provides that:

"The Italian government declares that it does not intend to use in the present her units of the French fleet placed under its control."

It adds that "on the conclusion of peace it does not intend to lay claim to the French fleet."

As long as hostilities continue with Great Britain, the terms declare, fortified areas and naval bases at Toulon, in France, Bizerte, Tunisia, Oran, Alberia and Ajaccio, Corsica, shall be demilitarized, the demilitarization to be completed in fifteen days.

No airplanes may leave French territory or French controlled territory, and airports are to be under Italian or German control.

Meanwhile, Italy rallied forces for a supreme effort to crush Britain's influence in the Mediterranean.

Fascist newspapers subordinated news of the Italo-French Armistice, effective today, to the high command's announcement that war would "continue against Britain until victory."

It was assumed the Rome-Berlin axis powers will strike their heaviest blows against British power simultaneously, Mussolini hurling his ships and planes and men against objectives in the Mediterranean and East Africa while Hitler attacks England directly.

Italy's fight against Frence, though brief, was "extremely bloody," said reports published here. When the Armistice went into effect and the last shot was fired on the Italo-French Alpine front at 1:35 a. m. today (6:35 p. m. Monday, EST) Mussolini's troops were said to be fighting on French soil on a sixty-mile front between Mont Blanc and the sea.

Supply trains preparing to move on the upper mountain trails unloaded ammunition and other war equipment and replaced them with hot wine, brandy and jam to enable Il Duce's victorious fighters to celebrate their triumph on the spot.

Ridgeley Voters Down Extra Levy For New Streets

Vote Is 183 to 71 In Special Election On $7,400 Project

A $7,400 additional tax levy to build, maintain and blacktop the streets and alleys of Ridgeley yesterday was downed by a vote of 183 to 71.

Only 254 of a possible 1,000 voters went to the polls to vote on the measure, which would have been an addition to the municipal levy, if passed.

Ridgeley had been granted a $62,000 WPA project, and the election yesterday was to decide whether or not the citizens were willing to accept the extra tax levy to raise its quota for the project.

Town officials, anxious to take advantage of federal funds while they are available, pointed out that under the new levy the average property owner would be required to pay only $2.13 annually for a period of three years. The average property in Ridgeley is valued at $1,700.

Under the $62,000 project, the new streets to be laid were River View avenue, Leo, Martin, Middle, Walnut, Mertens and John streets and a portion of Carpenter avenue. Streets scheduled for resurfacing were Knobley from Central avenue to the junction at the state road, William, Jones, Pecan and Terry streets.

Prior to the special election, Ridgeley city officials stressed the fact that the community never has laid any extra assessments or passed any bond issues. The officials were hopeful that the citizens of the town would cast their votes in favor of the proposed levy.

$49,000,000,000. While the federal debt now is $42,918,29,181, regular federal expenditures had been expected to exhaust the old debt limit within the next year, without provision for the extraordinary defense expenditures.

Effective dates of the tax increases vary. The income tax provisions apply to incomes earned during the 1940 calendar year, and will be payable March 15, 1941.

An extra ten percent added to the estate and gift taxes became effective at 11:45 a. m., eastern standard time, today, the time the president signed the bill.

Higher Excise Taxes

Increased excise taxes, such as those on liquor and cigarets, will become effective at 12:01 a. m., Monday, July 1.

The heaviest of the new tax bills will fall upon income tax payers. They are expected to pay $319,000,000 in the next fiscal year and $580,000,000 in the following four years in addition to their payments under former income tax rates.

The new law requires a return—a report on income—from everyone earning more than $2,000, whether subject to tax or not.

Another series of changes boosts the surtax rates on persons having net income of between $6,000 and $100,000. Under this provision, the surtax (which is in addition to the four percent "normal" income tax) was increased from five to six percent on net incomes of between $6,000 and $8,000. These increases range upward to a boost of from fifty-five to fifty-six percent on net incomes between $90,000 and $100,000.

The tax on amusements will apply henceforth to admissions of twenty cents and more, instead of forty cents as at present, but the rate of one cent for every ten cents or fraction thereof is unchanged.

An extra one percent was added to each bracket of the corporation tax, raising the rate for concerns with income of more than $25,000 from eighteen percent to nineteen percent.

Then on top of all old and new income tax provisions, a ten percent super tax was added. Thus, if a citizens' income tax bill comes to $100, the super tax increases it to $110.

CIO Unionist Asks $10,000 For Assault

AFofL Teamsters Union, Four Members Sued By Robert Nazelrod

A clash between rival unions last April yesterday wound up in Circuit court with the filing of a $10,000 damage suit against the AFofL Teamsters and Chauffeurs union, its acting business agent and three of its members.

The plaintiff is Robert G. Nazelrod, an official of the CIO construction union, who claims that Charles E. Stutzman, Kenneth A. Rasbaugh, William G. Randolph and Leroy L. DeVore assaulted him April 3 "with force and arms, beat, wounded and ill-treated him so that his life was despaired of."

The assault, for which Rasbaugh was jailed and Stutzman and Rudolph were fined, climaxed a dispute over entrance of the CIO into the construction field and particularly its taking over a job that the AFofA construction union had refused to work on when the owner became involved in a dispute with the Teamsters union.

Nazelrod claims he is permanently injured as a result of the attack and is unable to work.

Injuries he received included severe lacerations of the head, abrasions, contusions of the head and shoulders and a permanent injury to his shoulder, the petition states.

Nazelrod asserts he was confined for a long period of time as a result of the assault and incurred large medical, surgical and hospital bills.

William H. Geppert is counsel for the plaintiff.

According to the petition filed by Attorney Elmer E. Gower, the accident occurred on Route 40 in LaVale and wrecked the plaintiff's car and injured both passengers.

Injuries received by Mrs. Woolard included a permanently sprained back, a crushed side, injured left arm and shoulder and neck injuries, the suit states.

Mrs. Brooks, the owner of the car, claims she suffered a broken left arm, a concussion of the blood vessels and nerves of the right leg and an eye injury that permanently injured her eyesight.

All three are accused of defrauding local merchants of about $7,000 by passing bad checks.

Library Doing Its Part To Help Grads Get Jobs

Even if they can't find a job right away, Cumberland high school graduates have no excuse for not being informed on how to do a variety of tasks and how to go about winning employment.

That's because the Cumberland Free Public Library has mailed to each graduate a list of "career books" available at the library.

The library has on is shelves more than 1,000 books containing practical information which job-seekers will find useful in developing skills and then finding jobs in which to use them, according to Miss Mary G. Walsh, librarian.

The volumes range from "Personality Pointers" and "How To Write Better Business Letters" to standard references in such widely-separated fields as aviation, beauty culture, dentistry engineering, foundry work, gardening, homemaking, inventing, jewelry making, knitting, law, medicine, nursing, optometry, plumbing, quarrying, research, salesmanship, teaching, upholstering, ventriloquism and woodworking.

Among the latest additions to these useful books, Miss Walsh lists the following titles:

"She's Off to College," by Alsop; "Your Career in Agriculture," by Anderson; "Do You Want To Get into Radio?" and "This Flying Game," by Arnold; "West Point Today" and "Annapolis Today," by Banning; "What Engineers Do," by Binger; "Career Clinic," by Brooke; "Do You Want To Become an Accountant?" by Byrne; "The Pergan-da Home Study Library for Civil Service Examinations," in forty-five volumes.

The program was a pinch-hit affair, the speaker engaged for the occasion having been called away from the city unexpectedly, and Charles S. Catherman, program chairman, connived with Charles A. Piper in arranging the contest.

Instead of having the usual teams, questions were asked members who were called on at random. Those failing paid fines of ten cents each, and those answering correctly received a like sum. Prompters were subjected to a fine of twenty-five cents if unable to answer a hard question.

The quiz proved to be both enlightening and amusing.

Poultry Farmer Charged With Quadruple Slaying

NORFOLK, Va., June 25 (AP) — A sixty-four-year-old poultry peddler was charged today with killing his 28-year-old wife and their three children, whose bodies were found dangling from ropes in their chickenhouse yesterday.

T. G. Casteen, Norfolk county officer, obtained the warrant charging Charles C. Sanderlin with the quadruple slaying from Magistrate J. Stroud Roper.

The farmwife and her three children—Charles, seven; Louis, five, and Emily, six months—died of strangulation, Coroner L. C. Ferebee said after examining two of the bodies.

Under the questioning of county police, Sanderlin insisted he had been ill and had not seen his wife for five hours before he rose from bed to find the bodies in the henhouse. The bodies of Mrs. Sanderlin and the two older children were suspended from the rafters by light ropes. The baby was hanging from a rope wound about her mother's arm.

In Police court, Raymond Ward, of RFD 1, LaVale, was fined $1 for careless driving. Officers R. C. Cassen and L. E. Daniels preferred the charge.

Big Bond Issue Is Voted Down At Hyndman, Pa.

305 Citizens against Spending $26,000 For Sewerage System

HYNDMAN, Pa., June 25 —Voters of Hyndman today decided that they do not want a sanitary sewerage system and sewerage disposal plant by defeating the proposed $26,000 bond issue at the polls by 305 to 105 votes in a special election. A total of 410 ballots was cast.

If the vote had carried, the general plan called for the work to be done as a WPA project, the tentative cost to the borough being estimated at $26,000. It was proposed to charge the owner of each improved property the sum of forty dollars for a tap fee. The increase in tax-millage was figured at $1.70 per thousand dollars of assessed valuation over a twenty-year period.

It was pointed out that if sufficient owners could have been induced to pay the forty-dollar tap fee within twelve months following construction of the project, it was thought that this millage could be reduced to one dollar a thousand (assessed valuation) covering a period of two decades.

Italy Gets

territory for which the Italians long have been clamoring.

In addition to full rights over Jibuti, Italy got control of the French section of the railway running from that Gulf of Aden port to Addis Ababa, capital of Italian-conquered thiopia.

Demilitarized zones will be established in France, Tunis, and French Somaliland, ranging from thirty to one hundred and twenty miles in width. French troops must be withdrawn in ten days.

The zone of military occupation in France proper includes a narrow Alpine border area taken by Premier Mussolini's forces in their fourteen days of war against France.

It extends a short distance into France from the Swiss frontier to the Mediterranean, including Briancon in the north and Menton, Mediterranean port. Briancon is about five miles from the frontier, Menton about a mile.

For the duration of hostilities between Italy and Britain, and for the duration of the Armistice, the French Somaliland coast in North Africa is to be demilitarized entirely.

The agreement contained a clause similar to that in the French-German armistice requiring that the French fleet be surrendered at ports stipulated by German and Italian authorities.

Also like the clause in the French-German armistice, the French-Italian pact provides that:

"The Italian government declares that it does not intend to use in the present her units of the French fleet placed under its control."

It adds that "on the conclusion of peace it does not intend to lay claim to the French fleet."

As long as hostilities continue with Great Britain, the terms declare, fortified areas and naval bases at Toulon, in France, Bizerte, Tunisia, Oran, Alberia and Ajaccio, Corsica, shall be demilitarized, the demilitarization to be completed in fifteen days.

No airplanes may leave French territory or French controlled territory, and airports are to be under Italian or German control.

Meanwhile, Italy rallied forces for a supreme effort to crush Britain's influence in the Mediterranean.

Fascist newspapers subordinated news of the Italo-French Armistice, effective today, to the high command's announcement that war would "continue against Britain until victory."

It was assumed the Rome-Berlin axis powers will strike their heaviest blows against British power simultaneously, Mussolini hurling his ships and planes and men against objectives in the Mediterranean and East Africa while Hitler attacks England directly.

Italy's fight against Frence, though brief, was "extremely bloody," said reports published here. When the Armistice went into effect and the last shot was fired on the Italo-French Alpine front at 1:35 a. m. today (6:35 p. m. Monday, EST) Mussolini's troops were said to be fighting on French soil on a sixty-mile front between Mont Blanc and the sea.

Supply trains preparing to move on the upper mountain trails unloaded ammunition and other war equipment and replaced them with hot wine, brandy and jam to enable Il Duce's victorious fighters to celebrate their triumph on the spot.

Red Cross To Receive Proceeds From Softball League Tilts

With Mayor Harry Irvine tossing out the first ball, a series of soft ball games in the "Rocking Chair League" will be played for the war relief fund of Allegany county chapter of the American Red Cross, Thursday, at 5:30 p. m. at Community Park.

Two games will be played between the Elks and the Knights of Columbus. The regular teams will play the first game; but the second will be played by members of the two clubs weighing more than 200 pounds.

For the benefit of the players in the second game, rocking chairs will be provided at all bases, and a truck will be available to take them home. Girls dressed as Red Cross nurses will also be present.

Guests Invited

Guests for the first game will include Representative Byron and Walter Johnson, former big league ball-player and Republican candidate for Congress.

William A. Gunter and John B. Mordock are co-chairman of the promotion committee for the war relief fund in Allegany county.

Collection of cardboard cartons which were placed several weeks ago for donations to the fund, is being made now, according to Thomas F. Conlon, chairman of the carton committee.

Boxes Collected

Yesterday's reports from the committee showed that more than $140 had been received from boxes placed in the South End and the West Side schools.

Members of the committee plan to collect all other cartons in the city this week. Boxes in the county will remain until the local committees close their drive.

Funds obtained in the war relief drive now being conducted throughout the nation by the American Red Cross will be used to buy food, clothing, medications and surgical supplies for war-wounded and civilian refugees in Europe.

Contributions are being received locally at the war relief headquarters, 45 North Liberty street, Lichtenstein's Pharmacy, and the Truitt Drug store, Virginia avenue.

Ridgeley Voters Down Extra Levy For New Streets

Vote Is 183 to 71 In Special Election On $7,400 Project

A $7,400 additional tax levy to build, maintain and blacktop the streets and alleys of Ridgeley yesterday was downed by a vote of 183 to 71.

Only 254 of a possible 1,000 voters went to the polls to vote on the measure, which would have been an addition to the municipal levy, if passed.

Ridgeley had been granted a $62,000 WPA project, and the election yesterday was to decide whether or not the citizens were willing to accept the extra tax levy to raise its quota for the project.

Town officials, anxious to take advantage of federal funds while they are available, pointed out that under the new levy the average property owner would be required to pay only $2.13 annually for a period of three years. The average property in Ridgeley is valued $1,700.

Under the $62,000 project, the new streets to be laid were River View avenue, Leo, Martin, Middle, Walnut, Mertens and John streets and a portion of Carpenter avenue. Streets scheduled for resurfacing were Knobley from Central avenue to the junction at the state road, William, Jones, Pecan and Terry streets.

Prior to the special election, Ridgeley city officials stressed the fact that the community never has laid any extra assessments or passed any bond issues. The officials were hopeful that the citizens of the town would cast their votes in favor of the proposed levy.

Higher Excise Taxes

Increased excise taxes, such as those on liquor and cigarets, will become effective at 12:01 a. m., Monday, July 1.

The heaviest of the new tax bills will fall upon income tax payers. They are expected to pay $319,000,000 in the next fiscal year and $580,000,000 in the following four years in addition to their payments under former income tax rates.

The new law requires a return—a report on income—from everyone earning more than $2,000, whether subject to tax or not.

Another series of changes boosts the surtax rates on persons having net income of between $6,000 and $100,000. Under this provision, the surtax (which is in addition to the four percent "normal" income tax) was increased from five to six percent on net incomes of between $6,000 and $8,000. These increases range upward to a boost of from fifty-five to fifty-six percent on net incomes between $90,000 and $100,000.

The tax on amusements will apply henceforth to admissions of twenty cents and more, instead of forty cents as at present, but the rate of one cent for every ten cents or fraction thereof is unchanged.

An extra one percent was added to each bracket of the corporation tax, raising the rate for concerns with income of more than $25,000 from eighteen percent to nineteen percent.

Then on top of all old and new income tax provisions, a ten percent super tax was added. Thus, if a citizens' income tax bill comes to $100, the super tax increases it to $110.
